KNOW North Carolina

A SOUTH CAROLINA VERDICT.

North Carolina stands first in per acre crop values and South Carolina is close behind.

Only Massachusetts is ahead of North Carolina in textile manufacturing and again South Carolina is near at hand. Taken together the Carolinas, one people, with their cotton produced and manufactured, surpass in value the textile wealth of the Bay State. We do big things in all lines.

North Carolina is possessed by a mighty spirit, a progressive, a patriotic and a sacred spirit. I don't know who put it there, but it is there in the hearts of the people. Its origin offers a great study. It grips us and we are moved by it to do those things that ought to be done.

Let us go on unafraid, educating the children, taking better care of God's broken and defective, and moving forward in material progress. If there is any truth, if there is any religion, unless we do care adequately for the unfortunate beings in our State, we will surely rot and decay and go down to destruction.

Let us better organize our agricultural life, increase, tremendously increase our sea food resources, and in every line make the wealth we need to apply to the needs of the church and of a glorious democracy.

Your State is moving towards the discharge of its duties as a commonwealth, moving with a majesty that excites the admiration of the whole United States. A great New York financier told me that North Carolina was the Ohio of the South and could get all the money she wanted to use for al the great purposes of commonwealth building.—Governor Harvey.

Q. Which is correct—burnsides or sideburns?—H. E. R.

Q. Is "but what" correct when used in the sense of "but that which?"—D. N. J.

A. It is incorrect. The form "but that" should be used: "I am not sure but that my dress is too short."

LARGE REPRESENTATION OF THE A. M. E. ZION CHURCH AT BLUE RIDGE CONFERENCE

Welcomed to Hendersonville by J. Mack Rhodes, the Mayor, the 30th annual session of the Blue Ridge Conference, A. M. E. Zion Church, was opened most auspiciously with a large representation in attendance. The Conference will remain in session through Sunday, at which time the appointments will be announced.

Opening in St. Paul Church, the Conference was begun Thursday by Bishop Linwood W. Kyle, of St. Louis, Bishop George C. Clement, of Louisville. The sermon was preached by Rev. E. L. Steward, of Rutherfordton, this being followed by holy communion and fellowship. When general benevolences were collected in the afternoon session, it was found that a considerable increase over last year was apparent.

The conference, which showed a large sum for benevolent causes during the past year, consists of two presiding elder districts, 50 ministers and more than 8,000 members.

Many changes in pastorates are likely, it is believed, as quite a number of pastors have served the allotted period in one church. Asheville churches represented at the Conference are: Hopkins Chapel, Rev. S. J. Howie, Pastor; Southside Chapel, Rev. W. M. Anderson, Pastor; Varick Chapel, Rev. A. E. Gordon, Pastor; West Asheville, Rev. A. L. Conquist, and South Asheville, Rev. C. W. Simmons, Pastor.

Bishop G. C. Clement delivered the annual sermon at the Wednesday meeting, this being followed by the address of welcome by Mayor Rhodes. Church in which the Conference is gathered is an attractive structure recently completed, and a credit to Hendersonville.

Favorable reports from the various pastors were made to the presiding elders on Thursday. Improvement along all lines was recorded. Bishop Kyles will be heard on Friday.

The following general officers and visitors were present at the initial sessions: Rev. Dr. W. H. Goler, Financial Secretary, Philadelphia; Rev. Dr. W. W. Walls, editor of the "Star of Lion," official church organ, Charlotte; L. A. Rives, representing New York Age; Professor J. W. Younge, President Greeneville College, Greeneville, Tenn.; Rev. Dr. W. W. Slade, of Swannanoa.

Bishop Kyles at the close of his address, said in part:

"African Methodism has set itself to the task of evangelizing and Christianizing a race. From the time when Fathers James Varick in New York, and Richard Allen, in Philadelphia, struck for religious liberty and led their comrades against religious discrimination in Christian worship, Negro Methodism has occupied a unique place in the affairs of the race in America and abroad and won the admiration of the religious world. The action of James Varick and Richard Allen, the founders and pioneer leaders of Negro Methodism in the world, set in motion two great movements, the African Methodist Episcopal and the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Churches, which have influenced the race more largely in its social and religious advancement than any other agency. To these religious movements was added fifty years later the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church which has functioned admirably in race uplift. As the church of God, without regard to denomination, must lead the way for human development and world progress, so the distinct race churches must set the social and religious standards for the race and point the way to material success and prosperity. We boast of nearly a million and a half communicants in America and nearly three million followers. The wonderful industrial growth and intellectual advancement of the American Negro has greatly increased the opportunity of these negro denominations of Methodism to serve the race.

But these denominations have not confined their efforts to the uplift of the American negro. Having a keen interest in the world evangelism and believing that their efforts would be more effective among the darker races they have extended their labors to the dark continent of Africa and to some of the countries of South America. We have labored in Africa more than 50 years, with pleasing results. The work in South America is a new venture for Negro Methodism and the outlook is bright.

"Very early in the history of the Negro Methodist Churches our leaders realized the importance of Christian education in racial uplift and set themselves to the task of establishing schools for the training of negroes. Livingstone College and Wilberforce University were among the first schools established by negroes for negroes. The number of schools, colleges and universities established and now being supported by these denominations have increased to about 251. Many efficient negro leaders in school, church and community life have been trained through these institutions. Negro Methodism has sought to develop the race along all useful lines and prepare it for more efficient co-operation with other agencies at work in our behalf. The educational work of Negro Methodism is greatly hampered by the lack of funds needed for the development of our schools. Negro ministers in every pulpit should regard it their duty to create a deeper interest on the part of the race in education and should strive to induce wealthy members of the race to make large contributions to our institutions."

Q. What is ideal garden soil?—A. M.

A. The ideal garden soil is a mellow, well drained loam. As a rule, sandy loams will produce early crops, but the stiffer clay loams usually give larger yields.
