SOCIETY NEWS

WAX FIGURINE.

You are a graceful model, small
brown mother,
With your little one nestling in a dark Rebozo drawn close around your shoulders.
I hold you in my hand, study your modest Garment, your warm dark face and
your black braid,
Your gentle eyes and the face of the sleeping
Child, your slim hand resting against your breast.
I admire the delicate work of the artist,
Of the seventh generation of Zuñed War workers. His skill portrays your life, and beyond
The brown figure in my hand I see you.
Perhaps, as a basket weaver, embroiderer
Or cloth perhaps a vendor of pansies,
Gardenias, and violets, I saw you
At the Floating Gardens, paddling your boat
Filled with flowers; I saw you in Taxco;
In villages, your arms laden with pottery
Baskets and silk scarfs. You are a
wax figurine
In my hand; and you are a long, long story
In my heart; you are the quiet village
Mother in Mexico; you have learned patience
And endurance, your willing hands
ever
Making and offering beautiful things.

Marian Martin Pattern

PATTERN 9709

There's a fresh, sparkling, young air to this little frock that matches this gayest of seasons. It's Pattern 9709—a Marian Martin design. Crowning glory of the whole style is that charmingly shaped yoke with its scalloped lower edge. You may show it off in snowy white organdy or piqué, or let it match the dress, and do edge it with a froth of lace. Unusual softness through the bust-line is created by the curved, full-cut side bodice sections that are gathered in above the waist. Each center bodice panel forms one smooth piece with a sidefront skirt section. Edge the short sleeves with lace and add a tie belt to this light-hearted and flattering frock.

Pattern 9709 may be ordered only in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 1-8 yards 39-inch fabric, 1-4 yard contrast and 2 1-4 yards lace edging.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins for this MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS, and STYLE NUMBER.

Send your order to Daily Dispatch Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th St., New York, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Bridgers and Miss Mamie Lee Bridgers will entertain the senior class of Henderson high school and the members of the faculty at an outdoor supper Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock at their home on Andrews avenue extension.

They plan that their entertainment for the high school seniors be an annual event, and hope that all members of the class and of the faculty will attend the supper Wednesday evening, which will begin promptly at six.

Y. M. W. Club Holds Meeting At School

The Y. M. W. club held its meeting recently at the North Henderson school. The meeting was opened with the members reciting the Lord's prayer. Routine business was transacted.

A moving picture on "Flower Arranging", by Laura Lee Burrough, was given as a delightful session to the club. An interesting poem entitled "Why I Like Our Club", was given by Mrs. Arnold Carter. The club was pleased to have as their visitor Mrs. Sam Jones of Lynchburg, Va.

During the social hour games and contests were enjoyed, with prizes going to the winners. The hostesses, Mrs. G. R. Harper and Mrs. J. L. Edson served delicious refreshments.

Following the meeting the club members were invited to the classrooms of the lower grades of the school to see the fine paintings and other work done by the smaller children.

Mr. Vaughan Ill.

W. E. Vaughan is still confined to his bed at his home on Gholson avenue, where he has been ill for a week or more.

Closs's Column

CONTRIBUTED: "The next freshman class of the Pennsylvania State College has been prohibited by Student Council from smoking anything but corncob pipes."

WHICH WAS A REMINDER of the meeting of a certain important Board of Directors. There was a strange odor about the room, and each member who arrived at the meeting went in search of the source of this odor. Nothing was found until someone noticed that the President of the concern was smoking an old fashioned cigarette. Obviously home made. Questioned about the cigarette, he confessed that it was home made . . . out of rabbit tobacco.

GHOST STORY: (As told to me) "My son Henry died when he was twenty years old. He was the kind of a fellow liked to have fun, always whistling and playing the piano. One night a good while after he died, I woke up in the middle of the night because I heard a whistle. It was in the room with me. I sat up in bed but I couldn't see anything. The whistle went through the room and on into the kitchen, the same kind of whistle that Henry always did. Then the door shut and I didn't hear it any more. I woke the others, but they hadn't heard anything and said I must have dreamed it. Young Jim had heard it but me. But ever afterward we could hear the piano play by itself. There wouldn't be a few notes and we would go in to see who was playing and nobody would be in the room. One day it happened when I was in the room alone, I guess I turned real quick, but nothing was there. I couldn't hear anything. I felt Henry coming back to tell me not to grieve for him. I have felt his presence ever since."

ANOTHER FOOLY TALE: Friends of ours lost their dog for several days last week. They were waiting in vain for him to return home, so they ran an advertisement in the newspaper. The day the ad came out, the dog returned to his master's place of business. It pays to advertise, especially if you have an intelligent dog like that.

A RECENT VISITOR TO AN OUT-OF-TOWN HOSPITAL had to wait in the hall for several minutes. Seated at a nearby table was an instructor nurse who was explaining the charts to a student nurse. The student had evidently been up late the night before, because she was standing behind the instructor and she was fast asleep. The older nurse went on explaining until the last chart had been taken up. As she rose from her chair, the young nurse woke with a start, nodded brightly, and said she thought he understood everything all right. As far as the visitor could tell, no one but she was ever the wiser.

Carolina Bird-Lore

The Brown Thrasher.

Has the Brown Thrasher come to your garden for the summer? If you live in the east, you probably have had the good fortune of having him all winter and possibly so if you live in central Carolina. The thrasher is a common bird, and most gardens can boast of a nest in the hedge or near the ground in some bush.

This bird is a masterly songster, and when it sings it is usually from a topmost branch of a tree where "in a fine frenzy of inspiration" it gives out notes that are loud and clear though not quite so rich in quality as the mockingbird's, for which it is often mistaken. Several years ago, I was aroused at dawn by a friend with much musical training, who could not rest I coming to my room at that hour for field glasses to try to identify the bird that could give such a performance as she was hearing. She returned with a description of a Brown Thrasher.

The thrasher is a little larger than a robin and slimmer. He is bright rufous-red above with streaked underparts, unlike the wood thrush, with whom beginners often confuse him. The thrush has bright brown upperparts and a spotted breast and sides. Another distinguishing mark is the thrasher's very long tail.

The two other of our birds belonging to the same family are the mockingbird and the catbird.

Note: Come to the annual meeting of the North Carolina Bird Club in Statesville May 2 and 3 and see the thrasher and the thrush, the pictures-Birds of North Carolina.

R. W. Goodrich, owner of the Goodrich studio here and of the Marshall studio in Winston-Salem, won a cup for the best photograph in oil colors of a woman in entries at the recent convention in Jackson, Miss., of the Southeastern Photographers Association, it was learned today. The association covers seven states.

Mr. Goodrich made the photograph and Mrs. Goodrich did the coloring.

For many years Mr. Goodrich has been expected to win honors, but it was only recently that his family knew he was going to Winston-Salem where Mrs. Goodrich's family now reside, though they still own and operate the Lee Theatre.

to Britain might be imminent.

"We are working for a balanced fleet," Stark said, "with the proper proportion of capital ships, cruisers, aircraft carriers, submarines, light craft, fast auxiliaries and underwater defense. Our aircraft carrier program alone will give us the most modern and powerful fleet air arm in existance.

"Substantial portions of the entire program are ahead of schedule. We must be prepared to share our resources; and this we will do within the limit of our security."

ernment with utmost vigor."

Churchill indicated that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, whose trip to the Balkans and the middle east preceded the Greek campaign, would "take an important part" in the discussion. Eden is expected to report on his diplomatic efforts in the middle east to build up a front against the axis.

Churchill replied "no, sir" to a question whether he would consider appointing a small supreme war council without departmental responsibilities.

Mills Named Student Head

Randolph Mills, Henderson high school rising senior, was chosen president of the high school organization, yesterday, defeating Viola Hoyle in student elections under direction of the student council. Josephine Freeman led in a field of four candidates for the vice presidency.

Mills defeated the retiring vice president of the student body to become the second member of his family to head the high school students. His brother, Clifton Mills, was student president during the school year 1939-40.

Unsuccessful candidates for the vice presidency were Morton Calloway, Bill Weaver and M. H. Randolph, Jr.

Probation System Marks Its Hundredth Anniversary

gaged in juvenile probation.

Unique System.

North Carolina's adult probation setup is unique in the nation in that it is the only unified setup serving all courts of record within state boundaries. Wisconsin comes closest, but even so there are two distinct probation units—one for the city of Milwaukee and the other for the remainder of the state.

The Tar Heel organization serves more than 100 courts of record. At the time it started to function there were 124 in session every week.

During the 10-4 year 1,238 cases were received on probation from the courts, 1,576 the second year, and 1,696 the third. Of these, 2,120 came from inferior courts and 2,399 from the superior courts. All of the 39 superior court judges have used probation and cases have been received from every one of the hundred counties.

Probationers have earned in excess of one and a half million dollars.

Ten Per Cent Wrong.

The report of the commission shows that out of a total of 5,093 received on probation between November 1, 1937 and April 1, 1941, the probationary sentence has been revoked in 587 cases.

This simply means that ten per cent have failed to respond to probationary treatment. The 90 per cent are making good despite many handicaps. It is interesting to note that out of the ten per cent which failed [illegible] all had had previous convictions, said Mr. Semple.
