Finish The Job

As the third new week in the Third War Loan drive is begun, Vance county has raised something more than half of its quota. It seems to be fairly well taken for granted that the county will reach the full amount. There are many who will buy who have not bought already, but why delay the purchase?

We would like to make the motion here and now that every one who intends to buy bonds during the drive at all, do so within the next two or three days and let's close the campaign. Suppose we attain the goal—efforts can be relaxed with that behind now as well as with it behind at the end of the campaign.

It may appear that the more a county buys the more that is asked of it in the next campaign. We don't know whether that has anything to do with making appointments or not. Leaders have said it does not. Certainly it ought not. Anyhow, if there are lots of such things we can buy the allotment early and quit then as well as we can buy the allotment at the close and then relax. We are not advising a quitting at any time. At the present rate of spending the government needs all the money it can get, and it is patriotic to pay as far as possible by way of cooperating toward winning the war. If when every one has bought to capacity we are far beyond the goal, well and good. But why wait until the last eleventh hour to do something we can do now, and which nearly every one feels we shall do in the end? Let's finish the job right now.

The Luftwaffe is discredited, the Wehrmacht backtracks in Russia, the U-boat campaign appears to be stymied—Hitler's only consolation is that he still has his "intuition."

Korea reports the birth there of quintuplets—all of 'em boys. Well, there's one country without a manpower problem—or, at least, it won't have a generation from now.

A noted medico says a hearty laugh does a fellow more good than a meal. This may explain why really good jokes seem to be strictly rationed.

A real old-time newspaper man is one who can remember when he used to wonder where he could find a good picture for the front page.

The glass house of the future should have the additional advantage of making every moth imagine he is a goldfish.

The German Army has proven how big a country Russia really is. No matter how [illegible] battles are fought there is always room to retreat in.

By now, Tojo should realize that it is foolish to worry about saving the face when it's in the neck where you're getting it.

In trying to explain their "elastic defense" the Nazis naturally have to stretch the imagination.

Yanks and Cardinals, again. What is this—just the second half of last year's world series?

HAZARD—Although open season for most game may not come until after fall rains have lessened the danger of forest fires, officials of the Conservation and Development Department are concerned about the hazard of extra dry grass and cross with careless sportsmen walking through the woods. A very large percentage of forest fires are traceable directly to the carelessness of smokers throwing away burning matches, cigarette butts and pipe heels, and many fires listed as "origin unknown" are believed to have been started that way. Special caution is urged now because of the extra dryness, as well as the greater need for conserving vital forest products.

STYLES—It has long been interesting to note that styles in the architecture of farm buildings vary in different communities, as much as styles in dress. Down in the Border Belt counties the curing barns follow the pattern of a porch roof extending some ten feet from the walls on three sides—never one or two or four, but always three sides. The eastern and most of the Middle Belt counties use a somewhat higher barn without the extending roofs. Instead there is usually a break roof or temporary shelter nearby under which the workers hang the tobacco leaves ready for curing. Then in the Old Belt the fashion is to have a narrow apron roof extending the full length of the barn above the furnace openings. There are exceptions but an observing traveler could tell pretty well what section of the State he was in by the style of tobacco barns if he should drop a cow from the clouds into strange country.

CABINS—And speaking of architecture, there are perhaps more mud chinked log cabins in Caswell county than in other similar area in the State. There are also numerous farm outbuildings of that type but there is a sort of attractive incongruity in an old cabin built of hewn logs chinked with red clay abutting on the right of way of a concrete road.

FREED—The whole State of Virginia has been certified as in the drought area for purposes of getting additional allotments of CCC enrollees, but the only [illegible] Dan [illegible] in the Virginia [illegible]

STATES RIGHTS—The backers of a mountain road like hotel high up on the Blue Ridge, putting a North Carolina license on the car in which the newspaper man was behaving a ride, introduced himself as a citizen of Waco, Texas. I dished around to know what our [illegible] is going to do about backing up the Texas governor's fight for states rights. That was almost funny, and we hastened to assure the fair Texan that North Carolinians were under the impression our own governor was leading the scrap and we wanted to know what Texas meant to do about it. The answer to that was significant. "We don't care who leads and who helps, just so the idea is put across. If you insist on the credit you can have it, just give us the ruling."

Farmers Urged To Support Plan For Wood Production

College Station, Raleigh, Sept. 23.—North Carolina farmers are being asked to give their full support to the present campaign to increase production of wood products from farm woodlands to meet critical wartime needs, according to G. T. Scott, chairman of the State USDA War Board.

The campaign is being conducted by the War Food Administration in conjunction with the U. S. Forest Service, the State College Extension Service and other agricultural agencies in an effort to increase marketing of saw logs and pulpwood from woodlands other than commercial forests.

In a message to the State War Board, War Food Administrator Marvin Jones declared that the need for wood products has become critical in recent months, and that a large amount of the extra wood products wanted must come from farm woodlands.

"The campaign will stress only conservative cutting, that which will not destroy the growing stock or future productiveness of the woodland," Scott said. "Agriculture is one of the nation's largest users of wood products, and farmers who are growing food for the war effort can make a contribution toward its safe delivery by conservation cutting and marketing timber from farm woodlands. It is believed that [illegible] for wood products and stimulate wood production, the Army caravan now is completing a tour of Southern wood producing areas, Scott was informed. The caravan, under direction of Capt. John Edwardson, will visit Elizabethtown on September 30; Kinston on October 1, and Rocky Mount on October 2.

Italians Harvest Peanut Crop

Camp Butner Prisoner of War Camp, Sept. 20.—The first contingent of Italian prisoners interned at the Camp Butner prisoner-of-war camp have been hired out to work harvesting the peanut crop in the vicinity of three North Carolina towns, Scotland Neck, Tarboro, and Windsor, Colonel Thomas L. Alexander, internment camp commander, announced.

The prisoners also left early this week in military vehicles, will be quartered on the outskirts of the three towns in camps which have been prepared for them by military authorities. They will be guarded in the camps and at work by large numbers of armed guards attached to combat units of nearby camps. The administrative duties will be done by personnel assigned to the Camp Butner prisoner of war camp.

Colonel Alexander pointed out that prisoner labor can be hired out only in the event that there is no American labor available, and that the work is essential. In no event will civilian labor be replaced. The hours of labor for the interned men will be the same as for native help.

Upon arrival at the various towns, the prisoners will be hired out to farmers who have contracted for their labor with the War Department, and who have certificates from the War Manpower Commission, permitting them the hire of the interners. The prisoners will be paid at the rate of $.30 per day, but the government will receive the normal rate of pay in that section for the work.

All rules and regulations of the Geneva Convention will be strictly adhered to, declared Colonel Alexander, and the prisoners will not be exposed to the contacts of the townspeople.

Requests for prisoner of war labor from this region should be directed to Leo Werts, Arlington Hotel building, Room 305, 1025 Vermont Ave. N. W., Washington.

Competition For Places On Heel Team

[illegible] his boys, [illegible] their lines, or [illegible], all-star Yellow Jacket club will apply the finishing touches this afternoon and check up on the results at the final Saturday scrimmage before the crucial opener a week.

The Southeastern Conference leaders, who begin drills two months before the Tar Heels and who will have the advantage of playing at home with a full squad, are odds-on favorites, but the Blue and White squad is working against time to secure a creditable showing and, if possible, an upset.

BREEN RECOGNIZED

Camp Butner, Sept. 20.—Second Lieutenant Walter W. Breen, commanding officer of the Raleigh recreation area since June, has received the assignment of president of the work simplication team at Camp Butner.

Lieutenant Breen, native of Boston, Mass., was inducted into the army in October, 1942, and commissioned June, 1943 after attending Grinnell officer candidate school, Grinnell, Iowa. He was then assigned to the Raleigh recreation area.

Carolina Tech Team Georgia Tech Team On Next Saturday

Chapel Hill, Sept. 20—Coach Tom Young will be leading his first North Carolina varsity against the Georgia Tech powerhouse in Atlanta Saturday, but the new header doesn't know the fate of the Tornado well from his playing days.

Coach Young was a senior halfback for the Tar Heels in 1927, the first year the Yellow Jackets and Tar Heels renewed their rivalry after World War I.

The Golden Tornado won 13-0, but one of the Atlanta sports writers called it "the hardest 13 to 0 game played on any field."

Richmond Spiders Meet Blue Devils On Next Saturday

Durham, Sept. 19—Traveling to Durham to open their 1943 collegiate grid campaign, the University of Richmond Spiders will tangle with Coach Eddie Cameron's Blue Devils in Duke stadium Saturday afternoon to renew a football rivalry between the two Southern conference squads that has been dormant since 1927, the last meeting of the elevens.

The first of four Blue Duke opponents using Naval V-12 students, Coach Malcomb Pitt's aggregation has a distinct William and Mary aspect. Having ten former Indians in uniform and six in the starting lineup, Richmond will field an eleven that is reminiscent of the 1942 Southern conference champions.

Carolina Star

(HUSSEY-END, U.N.C.)

[illegible] boy, who starred at end [illegible] last year and who is [illegible] with Barney Poole from [illegible] this season, is working harder and looking better than he has done in his whole career. The [illegible] 200-pounder from High Point is the boy who snagged the pass that tied the Duke game last year. If he keeps up his present pace, he will be one of the leading flankers in the South this season.
