Directions for Taking Off Hides.

Split from jaw to tail. Insert knife in front of forward leg at point where hoof splits and extend slit over centre of knee to top or centre of brisket bone. Insert knife on hind leg between dew-claws and rip from that point over centre of gambrel to point in belly midway between bag and tail. In slitting from gambrel to belly, note that the hair on the butt grows towards the belly and that on the belly grows toward the butt. Let the knife follow the lie made by the meeting of the hair. In skinning, USE KNIFE VERY CAREFULLY SO THAT THERE BE NO HOLES, SCORES, OR KNIFE MARKS ON HIDES. To accomplish this, let the knife be very sharp and use the back of blade near the hide, the hide meanwhile being tightly drawn with other hand. Don't let hide fall into filth or blood, but if by accident it does, wash it clean on both flesh and hair. Don't allow flesh side of hide to be spread upon slaughter house floor but if rinsing is necessary, spread it upon a clean rack, which may be made cheaply of scantling and narrow boards. It need not be more than 2 to 4 inches high. Always remember that if you would have your stock bring the highest price, you must be cleanly in its treatment that it may reach the purchaser not only clean but white. Remove horns, skull, tail bone, shows, and dewclaws and spread in cool place until animal heat is out. Salt liberally with clean salt. Take especial pains to rub salt thoroughly into legs, flanks, neck and head. If you know of any butchers whom these directions will benefit, send to their addresses.
