WOMAN'S TRUE BEAUTY

The world pays court to woman's beauty
The king and peasant, rich and poor,
In admiration bow more humbly
At beauty's shrine than learning's door.

It makes a slave of heroic prowess
The scholar's son neglects his book,
When beauty smiles with eyes so guileless
[illegible]
[illegible] look.

Her graceful form by [illegible] chisel,
Is set right in marble [illegible]
The painter's skill portrays on canvass
Her lovely face free from all strife
And poets vie in sweetest measures
To sing her praises and her graces.
They [illegible] worship treasure
[illegible]

Evolution's thus fair [illegible] man,
Bond perfect forms, [illegible] extras
A weakness which foretells an open
Of future sorrow and [illegible]
What evidence of human frailty
To [illegible] in our war form,
Forgetting that all higher beauty
[illegible] truth [illegible]

The brightest rainbow winds will vanish,
The loveliest flowers must fade and die
Some the silent tomb must perish,
Whatever God gave to charm the eye.
The sunshine of the soul's virtue
False smiles can never [illegible] kiss destroy
All happiness which [illegible] Wakes
[illegible] and [illegible]

[illegible] woman of kind nature [illegible]
[illegible] her choicest [illegible] gifts
[illegible] form and features [illegible]
perfect.
Will thou not think it [illegible]
Move the dissolute [illegible]
And guard [illegible] by [illegible] prayer
Against deceptions [illegible]
Which bring the [illegible] and despair.

Immortal [illegible]
Is virtue, truth and faithfulness
When we adorn the life what beauty
Can equal these? What blessedness
What sanity in [illegible] children
The sphere of woman's [illegible]
Whose life was pure and [illegible]
Peace
[illegible] death [illegible]

A Newspaper Senator.

The world has not heard much about Ex-Senator Hearst, of California, who had an experiment of a few weeks as United States Senator, by appointment of Governor Stoneman. He was not long enough in Washington to become well known inside of his rather rude exterior; but now that he has carried the California Legislature for the Democrats, and will be elected for a full term, he becomes a man of national importance. The New York Herald says of him—"The California politicians say that Mr. Hearst, the eccentric millionaire, who occupied a seat in the Senate for a few months last winter, will undoubtedly be re-elected for the full term of six years, commencing March 4, next. The Legislature is Democratic on joint ballot by a majority of fourteen. Mr. Hearst is the wealthiest Democrat on the coast. He has spent, it is said, nearly half a million dollars for the benefit of the party in the last ten years. There are other Democrats in California who would fill the Senatorship with more dignity and doubtless more ability, but the desire is very general among the majority in the Legislature to show their gratitude to the rood man who [illegible] Mr. Williams' successor."

Mr. Hearst is the proprietor of the San Francisco Examiner. His only connection with the paper, however, is to draw his check each month to make good its losses. It is related of him that during the recent State campaign one of the Republican candidates who had been unanimously seated by the Examiner sought out Mr. Hearst and demanded satisfaction.

"Satisfaction?" exclaimed that gentleman, indignantly, "don't come to me for satisfaction. I never read the paper."

On another occasion a seedy looking individual solicited alms of Mr. Hearst. He represented that his family was in a starving condition, and that owing to ill health he was unable to work. Mr. Hearst afterwards remarked, in speaking of the occurrence, that the man was a big, lusty fellow, capable of knocking a horse down. He told the beggar he would like to see where he lived. He was conducted to a wretched part of the city where, upon investigation, the story proved true. He gave the man a twenty dollar gold piece and promised to see her again in a few days. Then taking the man by the arm he conducted him to the nearest station house and locked up in the charge of vagrancy. The next day he appeared in the police court and promised the judge that he would give the prisoner sixty days in the work house if the man's family was provided for. The judge agreed to the proposition and before the court adjourned Mr. Hearst had his man at work sawing wood. He [illegible] they [illegible] service.

Good Methods in Farming.

Some farmers are successful, others are not. Some live well, have the comforts and luxuries of life around them, others live hard, work hard, have few of the comforts and none of the luxuries. Some have a better start, perhaps, than others, better farms, and are better equipped, but it will be found that the men who succeed, who live well and make money are men of method, men who believe in and have a system of management, men who think on what they are doing, and do nothing at haphazard. The speculator, dealer in futures, stock jobbers, may take chances, for there is no chance work with the farmer. Nature establishes laws which are imperative, as to what may be produced in certain climes and on certain lands, while the laws of supply and demand regulate the prices and consequently the profit on what is produced. The thoughtful and successful farmer, while recognizing nature's laws, will also give heed to the law of supply and demand that he may not waste his time in cultivating what is already a drug upon the market, and will consequently cause loss to him. Experience proves that there is more money in an acre of grass than there is in an acre of cotton, the wise farmer will give some attention to grass and less to cotton; if one acre of potatoes will yield twice, thrice or four times as much as an acre of tobacco, the wise farmer will give more attention to potatoes and less to tobacco; if one good cow is more profitable than two poor cows, the wise farmer will keep one good cow instead of two poor ones; if the farmer can save money and feel independent by raising his own family supplies and feed for his stock himself, the wise farmer will raise them instead of buying when it may sometimes be hard to get the money to buy from what he has to sell. The man of method thinks of all this, lives well, makes and saves money, the man without method does not, works hard, lives hard and is always run to the throat latch to make ends meet, and then don't always do it.

NEW FOES.—One of the disintegrating political questions is Prohibition. In the North, it threatens to disrupt the Republican party; in the South, the Democratic party. This one issue makes the result of all the fall elections uncertain. New York, to all appearances, will go Democratic, so will Rhode Island and New Jersey, because of the popularity of the Prohibition platform. The result in all the States will be such as to show that the temperance people now hold the balance of power as an organization, and it will presently appear that a majority of the voters throughout the Union are on their side. The laboring people will also make themselves felt this coming fall on questions affecting their interests. The attitude the working people may take will strip the Democratic party in the same way that the Prohibition issue will disorganize the Republican party. It is a significant fact that the constitution of the Knights of Labor excludes liquor dealers, as well as lawyers and bankers, from membership in that order. It is a deplorable fact that in our large cities like New York, the workingmen's vote has been controlled mainly by the rum liquor dealers. If the Knights of Labor can put an end to this shameful alliance between rum and labor, which has worked such corruption in our large cities, it would be greatly to the credit of the Knights as well as a benefit to the country.—Dromgoole's Monthly.

An Honest Man.

One of the strongest characteristics of the Arkansas negro is to feign great indignation upon being accused, when he has reason to believe that no proof can be produced of committing a crime. The other day, Col. Billings meeting old Sandy, said:

"Look here, old [illegible] you and work together?"

"Oh yes, sah, plenty [illegible]."

"Then why don't you do it?"

"Does do it, sah."

"Why don't you [illegible]?"

"Does buy wood, sah."

"Why then, [illegible] my wood?"

"Steal yer wood? Why, sah, I never stole a stick of wood from yer in my life. Look heah, Colonel, I'm as honest a nigger as [illegible] good standin' in de church, an' yer kin bet yer set'e nights dat I don't steal yer wood. [illegible] steal dat wood, [illegible]."
