EDITORIAL NOTES.

BOODLE, brass and slander: the trinity of the Republican party.

A SCRATCH upon your ticket is as unbecoming as upon a lady's face.

NIGHT hawks and owls are on the war path. Be wide awake and keep your powder dry.

WHEN Thurman gets through Indiana, Harrison will be hid away in grandpa's hat, never to peep out again.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN has sworn off from drink, and is now the sporting editor of the New York Illustrated News.

SECRET circulars sent out by the Republicans in Indiana, and captured by the Democrats, give a doleful view of the Republican outlook in that State.

LET no man be idle. It would be a good idea for every one to talk to his nearest neighbor, then no one will be omitted.

DR. MCKENZIE'S book, relating to the sickness and death of the Emperor Frederick, is being seized by the German authorities wherever it is found.

MR. OATES of Alabama, offered in the House on last Monday a resolution of final adjournment on the 17th inst., and it was laid over until the following day.

ALLEN, the Great, is canvassing Indiana, and men, women and children stand half the night by railways to cheer the old Roman as he rushes on to victory.

FOR three months ending the 30th of September, industries have greatly increased in the South and more than in the six months preceding. Does this look like the people were afraid of the Mills bill?—Wilmington Star.

SOME claim that Captain Kitchin is too rough. The man who would attempt to hew a pine log with a razor would prove himself to be an imbecile. The Captain knows his business and handles his broad axe remarkably well.

THE Scotland Neck Democrat says: "A gentleman from Edgecombe said to us: 'And they tell me Halifax county is going Democratic.' Yes, we replied, the secret of it is a number of colored men are going to vote the Democratic ticket."

"ONCE more into the breach!" The battle will soon be over, and it is for the people to determine which flag will be victorious. No man has a right to be neutral: no Democrat can afford to be indifferent.

JUDGE SAWYER, in the United States Circuit Court at San Francisco, affirmed the constitutionality of the recent Chinese exclusion act, and held that all Chinese now on the harbor, as well as those on the way from China must be sent back.

THE Tobacco Plant comes to us with S. T. Ashe as one of its editors. The Plant has been first class from the beginning, but Samuel Thomas Ashe will add greatly to its ability and influence. He is the worthy son of the late Hon. Thomas S. Ashe, so much beloved in North Carolina.

THE Republicans are in favor of taxing everything that comes into this country except the revised version of the sacred scriptures. They have learned that it omits a word that is terrible to them, and they wish to have a large circulation for the encouragement of the party.

NEW YORK city has not stopped growing. Permits have been issued by the Bureau of Buildings during the past week calling for the construction of forty-eight new buildings involving a total cost of $877,000, and for alternation to forty-six buildings at a cost of $129,000.

It is admitted, by everybody, that the placing of raw hides on the free list was a very successful experiment, benefiting the shoe and leather industry without doing any harm to the farmers. The result of Buck Kitchin's experiments in tanning has not been fully reported, but it is believed that it will prove to be equally as successful and gratifying.

THIRTY millions of dollars is the amount Levi Parsons Morton claims from North Carolina. If the debt was just the people would work day and night to pay it, but it is unjust, and its payment would ruin all our people and bankrupt the State. How can North Carolinians vote for a man who is trying to grind them to powder and make their land "a waste, howling wilderness."

A REPORT from Annapolis, Md., of the 16th, says: Deputy Commander George of the Maryland Oyster Navy reports that the first battle this season between the navy and the law breaking dredgers took place last night in Chester river. The navy opened fire and met with a warm reception. About three hundreh shots were fired by both sides, but it is not known that any one was hurt.

THERE has been an outrage in Ohio with regard to which the Republican press is as silent as an oyster. Joseph Peaid, a young colored man of good education, a resident of Akron, Mich., was murdered by Hon. Mr. Salsgarber to a meeting at Van Wert, Ohio. The Republicans called him a d—d nigger because he attempted to speak for Cleveland, and they hurled rotten eggs and cracks and stones at him, smashing the windows and yelling for Harrison.

THE case from the U. S. Court of Louisiana involving the constitutional question whether a State can be sued by citizens of another State in a Federal States Court, came up for argument in the Supreme Court on last Tuesday. Chief Justice Fuller, after a consultation with his associates, said that the case involved such a great and such a novel question that it ought not to be considered for anything but a full bench, and that as Justice Matthews was absent, the case in question, together with the North Carolina case involving the same principle, would be indefinitely postponed.

A DISPATCH from Birmingham, Oct. 15th says: "The latest scheme of the Republicans in this state of Indiana is to import Alabama negroes to help carry the State for Harrison and Morton. Several confidential agents have been in North Alabama for several days engaging negroes to go to Indiana and vote at the November election. Thirty negroes left the little town of Flint, Morgan county, today, ticketed for Evansville. Another party will be sent off tomorrow, and others round for Evansville and Indianapolis will follow in a few days. It is said the negroes are paid $1 per day and transportation, and assured of work if they prefer to remain North after the election.

AGAIN Hill is ahead. It goes from all reports we conclude that Governor Hill aroused much more enthusiasm among the Democrats of Indiana than Mr. Blaine got up among the Republicans. Here is one account: "The Governor was just going to bed at midnight last night when his train reached Peru. Ten thousand people with dim beaux, torches and colored lanterns lined the track. The train proceeded through solid walls of humanity. The cheers were deafening. Hill, Hill, Hill, speech, speech came from thousands of throats. Gov. Hill put on his vest and coat and stepped out on the platform and said: 'All that I can say is this: I shall carry to the Democrats of New York the glad tidings that Indiana is sure to be carried by the Democrats. With this I bid you one and all good night and good bye.'"

THE Sioux chiefs with their interpreters, had a hearing at the Interior Department last Monday. Mr. Vilas assured the Indians that he was glad to see them, and requested them to state their objections to the new Sioux Reservation Act. Sitting Bull advanced and said: "My friends, I do not want to make a long speech. I have but a few words to say. I call you my friends because I am one of your people. I belong to the Government of the United States. As we have our own views of this new law, we wish to speak to you as man to man. I hope everything will be done in a quiet manner. This is all I have to say." John Grasse, who is sometimes spoken of as the Premier of the Sioux Nation, then spoke for an hour setting the objection of his race to the proposed sale of their reservation. He referred to treaties unfulfilled which made the Indians lack confidence in the Government. He was followed by other chiefs, the conference lasting until 2:30 p. m. Secretary Vilas told them all the speeches had been faithfully written down and would be laid before the President, who would give careful consideration to the matter. Whatever decision was reached, the Secretary added, would be announced to them at Pierre on Wednesday in the same room. He hoped they would then be prepared to say whether they would approve or disapprove of the decision which would then be announced to them. The conference then adjourned.

THE ARGUMENT EXHAUSTED.

There is no longer need of additional argument in this campaign. In National and State conventions, in the Senate and on the hustings, by the press and around the family hearthstone the leading issues of the day have been discussed until every man, woman and child understands them. What then remains to be done? Organize for work on the day of election and at the polls. Let no man stay at home from indifference or indolence. See to it that there is a fair election and an honest count. No man can estimate the importance of this election. Cleveland's administration has been clean, just and wise, and he deserves, and the country demands, his re-election. North Carolina has done well under the control of the Democracy, and there is no reason for a change. Craven county is steadily improving in the hands of the Coalitionists, and let her go on unto perfection.

THURMAN'S LETTER

We surrender much of our editorial space to the admirable letter of Judge Thurman accepting the nomination of the National Democracy for Vice President of the United States. Like everything from its distinguished author, it is the best of its kind that has yet appeared. It ought to be scattered broadcast over the country, so that every man may read the glorious gospel of Democracy.

THURMAN IN INDIANA.

The enthusiasm created by Mr. Thurman in Indiana is absolutely unbounded. The meeting held in his honor at Indianapolis is without a parallel. Mr. Thurman left his hotel in a carriage drawn by six white horses, beautifully caparisoned, and slowly made his way to the fair ground. The rain fell torrents, but men and women stood uncovered for hours to pay honor to the illustrious statesman. All efforts to number the multitude was useless, and it could only be estimated by the ground it covered. Forty acres of land scarcely afforded standing room for the unterrified Democracy. Never was the like seen on this earth. Thurman was at his best. A mental pyramid, astounding all by the magnitude of its proportions, reflecting the light of past generations, and inspiring hope for ages to come.

All along the battlements, from every watch-tower comes the shout of the sentinel, "All is well!"

New York, Indiana, Connecticut, New Jersey, Michigan and the South, in solid phalanx, under the broad flag of the American Democracy!

MANLINESS.

Nothing is more commendable than manliness. It has many forms of development, but it is always the same.

In times of great excitement manliness is constantly called into exercise, and sometimes this is under circumstances that try it as the fire tries gold.

Truth, honor and bravery are inseparable from manliness. A person may be ever so gifted in speech and polished in manners, but if he does not hold his honor as priceless, and bring to the advocacy and defenses of truth a fearless and chivalric spirit, he places his manliness at a fearful discount and runs the hazard of absolute social bankruptcy.

Sometimes manliness lies dormant. There is no occasion for its manifestation. Unobtrusively its possessor pursues the even tenor of his way but when the emergency arises it awakes and comes forth like the bursting of volcanic fires.

Manliness is confined to no clime. It lives alike amid Alpine snows and beneath tropical skies.

There is no place where manliness has a fairer or a better field than home. The man who struts the streets, and bows and smiles upon the boulevard, and then goes home to snear at his wife and snarl at his children has no manliness, but is the most despicable of men and meanest of cowards. He only is manly who shares with cheerful heart the little burdens of a thousand cares, and around whose lustrous soul fireside satellites revolve in endless circles of ever increasing beauty.

War has its trophies, and in its serried ranks manliness must be supreme: ruling the spirit of officers and men, and making the breastwork of a nation the bosom of her sons. But give us rather the manliness that adorns the walks of peace: tunnels mountains for railways and spans rivers with bridges: builds factories and founds colleges: crowns the land with golden harvests and delicious fruits, and makes home happy in songs of praises, and beautiful in garlands of love.

It is maintained by Sir William B. Grove and other philosophers that the developments of civilization and science have not lessened the antagonisms which formerly showed themselves in wars which devastated the earth and deluged it with blood, but have only changed their form. Instead of fighting with simple club and sling or bow and arrow, or with dagger, spear or sword, as in primitive times, men now fight with pens and printers' types, with telephones and telegraphs, with lawyers, courts and legislatures, and with all the diversified paraphernalia of social, commercial and political competition.

PROOF OF MEANNESS.—"Nothing," says John Foster, "more palpably betrays littleness, meanness of soul, than a supercilious looking down on estimable friends, of inferior order, after a man has attained some unexpected elevation." And yet nothing is more common. A man meets with a sudden increase of wealth, and he fails to recognize as acquaintances those whose favor he once courted. A man forms some distinguished acquaintances, and the plain people with whom he was glad to associate are passed by. According to Foster, there must be a great deal of meanness of soul in the world.

An old gentleman of great experience says he is never satisfied that a lady understands a kiss unless he has it from her own mouth.

THURMAN'S LETTER [illegible] ACCEPTANCE

COLUMBUS, O., [illegible] 1888.

Hon. Patrick A. [illegible] and other committees.

Gentlemen—In [illegible] I send you [illegible] acceptance of my nomination for the office of Vice President of the United States, made by the National Convention of the Democratic party at St. Louis.

When you [illegible] to call upon me at Columbus, and officially notify me of my nomination, I expected to express my sense of obligation to the convention and state clearly my views of the duties of the office. I did not seek the nomination, I did not feel at liberty, under the circumstances, to decline it, but [illegible] as I said before, I shall do whatever I could properly do to promote the success of the principles and [illegible] I believe to be those of the people. The platform adopted by the convention is, in my judgment, a true exposition of the principles of the Democratic party, and I will do my part to make the work of its friends in the approaching canvass effective for the success of those principles. The platform recognizes the fact that recession from the income taxes imposed by the war is now demanded by the public interest. It proposes a reduction of the revenue to the necessary needs of the government, and it proposes that the reduction shall be made by the repeal of those internal taxes which are the most burdensome and most vexatious to the people, and by a reduction of the duties on imports, so as to afford relief to the consumers of the country, and yet not so much as to injure any interest which has been established under the existing system. The Democratic party has never made a question of revenue a pretext for the application among its enemies of the doctrine that is approved by the maxim, salus populi suprema lex. Both were non-commercial and agricultural in their origin.

[illegible] the transportation Committee [illegible] through Mr. B. B. Hopkins, [illegible] General Passenger Agent of the Florida Railway and Navigation Company, [illegible] Extension [illegible] Florida road [illegible] time is noted for [illegible] and is rapidly expanding [illegible] having already run out [illegible] beyond the limit [illegible] in different States of the Union holding return tickets can get the office of the nearest representative of the Southern Association and have the same made good for return at such time as they may ask to come. This will be interesting news to thousands of Florida people.

The official bulletin today is as follows, now cases, 24; deaths, official cases [illegible] and deaths, 326. Four of the new cases were white and 10 colored. The general impression prevails that the epidemic is near its end.

[illegible] 18.—The official report of the Auxiliary Sanitary Association [illegible] Four hundred and [illegible] cases in the city since 1879.

Many of the [illegible] are [illegible] Mr. Wilson of New Orleans [illegible] Miss St. Pierre of Washington, who [illegible] Miss Walsh of [illegible] will leave. Misses Walsh, of [illegible] and Pierre, of [illegible] are [illegible]

The physicians continue at the San Hill Pavilion [illegible] maintain and many cases have been cured.

Dr. Dr. R. [illegible] President of the Committee on Hygiene of the Board of the Auxiliary Sanitary Association, who has been residing at Point Pleasant, is expected back today. There is some fear expressed that it may [illegible] fever.

[illegible] Sandy [illegible] though Dr. Rose [illegible] who was delegated to go there, [illegible] at sunrise there have been twenty-five cases and two deaths. There are about twenty-five laborers [illegible] and 150 persons in [illegible] Sandy has been placed in quarantine by special train.

The Board of Health [illegible] received, is he said, that he had information that funds had been sent here [illegible] for the sick [illegible] which had never been [illegible] Committee [illegible] Auxiliary Committee stand ready to supply any reasonable want [illegible]

The chairman of the Auxiliary Committee [illegible] signed by a large number of prominent influential citizens, suggesting that the funds furnished by the city be appropriated to the employment of a [illegible] physicians and a large number of laboring men. The matter was referred to a committee.

Two of the visiting physicians [illegible] today and left for Camp Perry. The others have [illegible] and will remain.

In the heroism displayed by many people, both male and female, throughout the fever-stricken districts in Florida can be not better illustrated than by instance the self-sacrificing bravery of Mr. Riley, Superintendent of Transportation of the Florida Railway and Navigation Company, and stationed at Baldwin, Fla. Located in the very centre of the virulent fever, Jacksonville, Fernandina, Macclenny, Gainesville and Sanderson forming lines in all sides, Mr. Riley, totally unacclimated, worked assiduously and conscientiously day after day operating the company's 600 miles of railroad with our shutting down even for a day. Mr. Riley accepted the position of Superintendent of Transportation of the Florida Railway and Navigation Company when T. A. Phillips resigned that office to accept similar work on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad. At that time Mr. Riley was trainmaster of the Florida Railway Navigation Company. When the yellow fever became epidemic he was requested to leave the city, but he refused to do so. He remained at Baldwin, within [illegible] miles of Jacksonville, and [illegible] to work at his post.

Later General Superintendent Maxwell was stricken down with the dread fever, and up to Sir [illegible] feel the effects of the fever. With fever on every side, he kept his employes [illegible] impossibility, he never faltered, but cheerfully urged his overworked laborers and kept the road running in every division of the state. He [illegible] a daily stay in Baldwin [illegible] Baldwin and Fernandina, [illegible] a tri-weekly train between Jacksonville, Sanford and Baldwin. His heroic example inspired his officers and employes, and the road worked on [illegible] well. As a result of the company not disbanding leave Baldwin and [illegible] himself of some more healthy point along the road where there was less danger of contagion, but he [illegible] and has manfully remained at his post with a courage [illegible] difficult to find in equal.

It has been frequently [illegible] the outbreak of yellow fever in Florida that all passengers travelling to or through Tampa, Fla., to North [illegible] have been stopped. These restrictions, as shown by the records of the Board of Health at Tampa, which show that during the months of August and September, this year, 251 people were landed there direct from Havana by the steamer Mascotte, all of them en route for points North. Not only were these passengers permitted to pass through Tampa, but 141 of them who carried baggage were allowed to take it with them to their destination North. These records are official and [illegible] Northern press, and are completely [illegible] continuing their journey after [illegible] Tampa [illegible] for the [illegible] passenger was arrived at that port and proceeded on the train [illegible] the custom [illegible]
