Populists, Will You?

The committees of the Republican and Populist parties have met and [illegible] agree to fusion. The following are the remarks of John C. Dancy, the negro politician of Wilmington: Will the Populists of Craven and adjoining counties do as we have done? They are feeling what the outside means. Will they do this thing.

"This is one," said John C. Dancy, the negro politician member of the executive committee for the state at large and collector of the port at Wilmington. "This means fusion complete and harmonious from bottom to top. It means that the Populists will again work in harness and help us beat the Democrats one more time.

How General Burt Was Tricked.

One day when General Andrew S. Burt was lieutenant colonel of the Seventeenth United States Infantry Captain Charles A. Booth then a lieutenant met him at the rifle range.

Lieutenant Booth was shooting, and he "called" each shot as he fired with out waiting for the markers to signal the result.

"You're a pretty good guesser," said the Colonel. "Why don't you admit you're guessing where those shots land?"

"I'll bet you a box of cigars," said the junior officer, "that I can call 20 shots in succession."

"Taken," said the old warrior.

Lieutenant Booth missed.

"Miss," he announced, and a red flag from the target told that this was correct.

Another shot.

"Miss," he declared. A third shot. "Miss again," he said. Fourth shot. "Fourth miss," announced Booth. Another shot. "Miss," again sang out the lieutenant.

"Hold on there," put in Colonel Burt. "What are you trying to do? I thought you were going to fire at the target."

"I'm trying to win my box of cigars," said Lieutenant Booth.

"Don't tire any more," said the colonel. "They're yours."—Chicago Journal.

An Invincible.

When Alcibiades was told that his countrymen had passed sentence of death upon him for being at the head of a conspiracy to overthrow the religious and political constitution of Athens, he said, "I will show them I still live." He obtained from Sparta assurance of personal safety and went hither. He delighted and charmed the Spartans, as he had the Athenians in his earlier years. He adopted their customs and dress and was the strictest Spartan of them all. He wore his hair short, bathed in the icy waters of the Eurotes and ate their black broth and barley bread. They believed that he had been misrepresented. In truth, as Plutarch said, "he changed color more quickly than a chameleon." In Sparta he was grave, temperate and fond of physical exercise. In Ionia he was easy going, luxurious and merry. In Thrace he was drunken. In Thessaly he was devoted to horsemanship, and in the court of the Persian satraps he surpassed Tissaphernes himself in magnificence. As Sparta was to be the prize of the Athenian victory he showed the people their danger, advising them to begin active operations against that city. No foreign adviser would have been given them, and they profited by it.

Manilla Hemp.

Every engineer knows what manilla hemp is, but few are aware that it is the product of a species of banana which is cultivated in certain localities in the Philippine islands. The plant, called by the native "abaca," throws up in its fourteenth or fifteenth year a flowering stalk to a height of [illegible] feet, which spread out at the top like a crown of huge umbrella leaves. When it is 3 years old, it is cut down, and the stalks are torn into strips. These strips, while still fresh, are drawn between a knife and a wooden block, and the soft cellulose matter is removed. The fiber is then hung up to dry in the open air until it resembles rope. Each stalk gives about a pound of fiber, and two natives will turn out about 25 pounds in a day. The inferior fiber, which is thin and weak, is used by the natives for making articles of clothing. The familiar manilla ropes are made from the fiber of the outer layer, which is hard and strong. The whole supply of manilla hemp practically comes from the Philippines, and the United States consumes 41 per cent of it.

Picturesque Description of Arizona.

We live in a land of high mountains, higher dollars and high taxes; low valleys, low neck dresses and low wages; big, crooked rivers and big, crooked statesmen. Big lakes, big drinks, big pumpkins, big men with pumpkin heads, silver streams that gambol in the mountains and pious politicians who gamble in the night; roaring cataracts and roaring orators; fast trains, fast horses, fast young men; roses that bloom the year round and insufferable girls with rosebud mouths, sharp lawyers, sharp financiers and sharp for shoes, noisy children, terrible plans that lie like a shocked water and three inches of newspapers that lie like thunder.—Yuma Sentinel.

A Zulu Rain Charm.

The Zulus employ a rain charm which is very remarkable considering their ignorance of science and nature. They call it "Uhl," and after the tribal wizard has consecrated it and invoked it to "heaven land" they throw it into a pool of water.

In spite of their own indifference to the sufferings of animals they believe that the sky, which they never see to be a personality, will be full of water at the death of the land and do sympathetic tribute in showers of rain.

Free Passes.

The legislature first passed a bill and refused in France. Everyone, inclusive of the chambers of deputies, has free traveling on any railroad in the country and is furnished with a medal. Extraordinaries include such that he gets his privileges. In the matter of pay they are better off than the British members of parliament, though their indemnity of $[illegible] a day is small beside the $5,000 a year of the United States congressman.

A Note.

Mrs. Dickersleighington: "Hark! Didn't I hear something touch?"

Her husband: "Yes, I have good ears." It was only the grating tackle.—Puck on Leaf.

When She Takes Her Time.

"Is your wife a rapid reader?"

"Yes, unless I'm waiting for the paper."—Chicago Record.

The Public Building

Editor Journal: I notice that the front steps of the Government building is a great resort for a number of half grown negro boys. In entering the building one frequently has to pick an opening between these idle loafers which is by no means an attractive task.

Yesterday afternoon upon going into the Post office, I observed one of these darkies stretched at full length upon the steps, sound asleep, and apparently possessed with the idea that he was at a private bank somewhere up in Dixie town.

Now it is well known that these [illegible] are not permitted in the National government and I think it is given that the janitor was [illegible] duties, or the marshal [illegible] proper authorities.

A Stopping Place.

H. M. Flagler has purchased from the British government the old barracks at Nassau, on the island of New Providence for $12,500 and will build a handsome hotel on the site. Nassau is in the Bahamas, on the direct route to Cuba from the United States, and is touched by all the steamships. It is a great health resort and with all the coming travel between this country and Cuba and with Cuba itself, will have a boom.
