Morning Program

The morning program is taught by Fern Sanderson, who excels in her teaching methods and, most importantly, in her rapport with her young students.

Fern emphasizes the importance of early child development by providing stimulating tasks that appeal to the age level and individual ability of the child. Special attention is devoted to the development of social skills of cooperation, negotiation and helping solve interpersonal problems.

At Gan Yelodim we believe that basic skills develop best when they are meaningful to children. Basic subjects, like math, science, social studies and health, are integrated through playful projects with the specially designed learn/play equipment. The school features weekly instruction in computer and gym.

Children participate in cooking class where they learn to measure ingredients. They participate in dramatic play, listen to and help read stories, and dictate stories.

Activities are designed to develop self-esteem in the child and positive feelings toward learning.

"There is no one wiser than the experienced." Children learn most through participating in educational projects. They acquire knowledge about their physical and social worlds through the playful, active interaction with objects and people.

The school recently hired Susan Fleishman as a Teacher's Aide. Her love and affection for the children add a special touch to the school atmosphere.

Opportunity for outdoor exploration is provided on a regular basis. The children observe changes in the environment, explore plants and animals, and work with wood and tools.

Afternoon Program

The afternoon program at Lubavitch, which is taught by Terry Tucker, is a time for children to express themselves through music, drama and art. The children learn the fundamentals of music through active involvement. Use of various musical instruments help the children develop listening skills and increase their rhythmic awareness. Some of the activities include using their bodies to demonstrate musical terms, such as "legato" and "staccato," playing with rhythm sticks and other instruments to develop a sense of tempo and singing popular children's songs that incorporate mime and whole body movement.

Incorporating creative drama into our program encourages the children to use their already-vivid imaginations. The children have access to a puppet theatre and a large selection of hand puppets which allows them to spontaneously "act out" and create. Because spontaneity is such an important part of being a child, we provide many ways of inspiring each child to express himself. Putting on "magic" storyteller hats that fill their heads with ideas for stories to share with others is just one example.

Each afternoon our children are engaged in a different art activity. Painting paper mache dinosaur eggs, making shapes from peanut butter playdough and weaving colored paper strip pictures are only a few ways that each child is encouraged to develop creatively.

Twice a month the school takes educational field trips where they learn fascinating facts about the world in which we live. Such trips include nature tours, Discovery Place, Children's Theatre and excursions to observe many aspects of daily work and life.

Introdu

On Sunday, November 13, 1988, Lubavitch Preschool and Day School will participate in the 1988 Community-wide Children's Expo. The following is a description of the educational program at the school.

Gan Yelodim Preschool provides quality education, both in secular subjects. The program is designed to enrich the child's understanding and appreciation of the world in some way. The kindergarten program at Lubavitch Day School provides students an opportunity to learn in an environment conducive to their development.

The school is staffed by dedicated teachers who share a devotion to the children.

Our highly acclaimed program provides a structure and free play that meets children's needs in the moment of their lives. Our teachers use their creativity to challenge the imagination of their students.

The free play at Lubavitch Preschool develops child's social skills and self-expression. An abundance of special play rooms are available to encourage creativity and enjoyment.

Lubavitch Preschool boasts a program for 2-year-olds. Led by Debbie Maslin, we introduce babies into little people.

Debbi instills within the little ones a love of reading and communication. Her ability to give directions has exceeded all expectations.

The children partake in many activities and have much time for themselves to play with their toys and how they are developed accordingly and entering the next grade.

Debbi has unlimited patience for her children. With her abundant love for herself as a super teacher for
