New Milk Plan Is Jobless Get Food

The new Scott cheese factory and milk plant at North Wilkesboro is at present manufacturing about 1200 pounds of cheese and 400 pounds of butter each day and is taking 10,000 pounds of surplus milk out of the farm territory nearby for which the plant is paying cash twice each month.

When the North Wilkesboro plant was opened last January 19, only 300 pounds of milk was received the first day. This amount has steadily grown until the plant is now receiving an average of about 10,000 pounds a day. The milk is paid for on a butterfat basis at the rate of 22 cents a pound for fat at present.

H. M. Scott, the owner, is receiving the cordial support of county farm agent A. G. Hendren and his assistant J. A. Ellis, Jr. The plant occupies a new brick building just on the edge of the business section and approximately $15,000 worth of modern machinery has been installed. The highest word in sanitation is practiced and there are two cooling and ripening rooms for the manufactured product. Five men are employed in the cheese making phase of the factory and two ladies have charge of the butter making. Mrs. Scott aids her husband in looking after the business here and H. A. Wendland, an experienced cheese maker from Wisconsin, is factory superintendent.

Hundreds of visitors inspected the new plant at an agricultural rally held in North Wilkesboro last week and many of them expressed their gratification at the additional market established for the promotion of the dairying industry in North Carolina. At present there are 19 milk routes leading into North Wilkesboro and about 300 additional patrons are bringing in their own milk. So far, the plant has been able to sell every pound of cheese and butter manufactured.

County Agent Work Done At Low Cost

The work of the county farm agents in 83 counties where they are at present employed costs an average of less than one cent out of each dollar levied in county taxes.

This fact was developed last week following a study of figures secured by Charles A. Sheffield, assistant extension director at State College, from the State Tax Commission. The various counties of North Carolina raised $31,800,000 in taxes in 1931 and the average rate was $106. Out of each dollar levied in the counties but one-half of one cent went to county farm agent work and this was augmented by one-fourth of a cent when the state's appropriation was added. The total cost per dollar of tax money amounted, including the federal offset to .88 of one cent.

Considering the cost of this work to the average tax payer of the county, however, if a man paid $5 in county taxes, he would invest only a little over four cents in the salary and expenses of a county farm agent; if he paid $10 in taxes, he would invest only nine cents; if he paid $25 in taxes, he would invest 22 cents; if he paid $45 in taxes, he would invest 39 cents; if he paid $50, he would invest 44 cents; if he paid $75 in taxes, he would invest 66 cents and if he paid $100 in taxes, he would invest 88 cents in farm agent work. This is less than one dollar for each hundred dollars paid by the average county tax payer.

Despite this low cost of county extension work, the agent is about the human connection the farmer has with his experiment station, State College, and United States Department of Agriculture. More people are returning to the farms that city jobs are scarce and the young people are remaining on the farms. This all means that the county agent is needed now more than ever and it is false economy to dispense with his work.

Dairy Farming Builds More Fertile Soils

Dairy farming improves soils instead of depleting them. On every well handled dairy farm large quantities of legume hays, wheat bran, cottonseed meal and other such feeds are converted into milk through cows and there is a considerable residue left in the form of manure which will help to build up the soil.

John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at State College has done much at State College has done some careful calculating about the plant food value of these feeds. He says that on a basis of ten cents a pound for nitrogen and five cents a pound for phosphroic acid and potash, alfalfa hay has a plant food value of $8 a ton; soybean hay, $7.85; clover hay, $6.69; wheat bran, $9.69; corn meal, $4.69 and cotton seed meal, $19.92. Only about 20 per cent of this plant food value is lost in the feeding process which means that there is a cumulative accumulation of plan food on every well managed dairy farm. Further evidence is shown, he says, in the good crops usually produced on such a farm.

"Not only does dairy farming help to build up the soil, but the cropping system followed prevents much washing.

"On account of the organic matter and countless bacteria in cow manure, has a greater farm value than a chemical analysis would show," says Arey. "The organic matter improves the physical condition of the land and increases its water-holding capacity. This improved condition also makes a favorable situation for the bacteria to liberate plant food in the soil particles."

Mr. Arey does not believe any system of farming can be permanently profitable unless soil fertility is maintained. It makes no difference, he says, what the cash return may be from a crop because if the wealth is harvested at the expense of the soil, the farmer will lose in the end.

FINES CREEK

The people of this section have been enjoying this beautiful weather, very much. They are also very busy working their crops and harvesting their wheat and oats.

HAZELWOOD WINS BY A SHUT-OUT

Hazelwood beat Beacon last Saturday in an Industrial League tilt, by the score of ten to 0. Burrell, the local hurler, held the visitors to six scattered hits, also striking out eleven of the opposing hitters. Isley and Patton led the swatters for Beacon, each getting two hits, while Fox Fisher, Robeson and Price garnered two hits a piece for the locals. Pace started the hurling for Beacon, but after giving up three doubles, one single and a walk in the first, and a tripple and two singles in the second he gave way to Smith, while Rebo relieved Biggs behind the plate.

Hazelwood travels to Black Mountain this Saturday to play Dimension.

STORY OF MONEY

effigies. A coin of Aegina claimed to belong to the year 700 B. C. bears as a device the figure of a tortoise. Judging from the devices on another coin its date has been set as the 21st or 23rd centuries. The symbol upon it is the head of Minerva; on the reverse side there is a large owl—the bird sacred to Minerva as the goddess of Wisdom. It has been claimed that Greek proverb "taking owls to Athens" referred to this silver coin which was of great importance to the traders of that city. Another story can be told of blood-money, of Peter's pence, of the coin of Ceasar, of the parable of the talents, of Judas and his thirty pieces of silver, but sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

OUR CHIEF RESOURCE

It is a wise people, who would build a democracy in which to training and opportunities of youth are not allowed to go up and down with the stack market but are kept equal, high, and as constant as the life stream of the people. We must pay on time dollar for dollar, and interest too. To tear down is a wastful way to pay up. The schools and colleges are the chief resources with which in the long run the public debt will be paid. Let us pay off the longrunning debt by the long-run building up of the latent capacities and creative power of the people.—President Frank Graham, of the University of North Carolina.
