Timely, Practical

Household Suggestions

By RUTH CURRENT
N. S. State College

It's no time to waste or throw away any kind of food. The foods not needed for the hungry world are the foods that will help us fill the gap made by our voluntary curtailment of fats, oils, and grain.

Mashed potatoes can pinch-hit for bread or flour in many familiar dishes, thus saving wheat for starving pople overseas, and incidentally providing variety in family meals. A bowl of mashed potatoes, made up and waiting in the refrigerator, can be called on for use in place of bread in the stuffing for chicken, in place of biscuit crust on meat pie, and even in place of the toast on which the breakfast poached egg is usually served.

Potato Stuffing for Chicken. Ingredients: 2 cups unseasoned mashed potato; 1 cup stale bread crumbs; 1 egg, beaten; 1 tablespoon finely minched onion; ½ cup fat, melted; 1 teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; 1 teaspoon sage. To make, combine all ingredients and pile lightly into the bird. Or use in place of bread stuffing in meat roasts.

There is plenty of room for saving and better nutrition in the foods that come into the kitchen, if they are properly prepared. Food values can be almost completely lost in cooking. For example, paring away one-tenth to one-quarter of the potato results in physical loss, but in addition iron and vitamin C in the potato are wasted by not cooking it with the jacket on.

There is also nutritive food lost when housewives cook vegetables in too much water and then drain off the water into the sink. Here's a waste of vitamins and minerals which have seeped out of the vegetables into the water. In addition to that, flavor which might encourage the eating of such vegetables as cabbage and turnips is lost by too much cooking.

Maple Grove News

Mrs. Ed Glavich

The Maple Grove Woman's Society of Christian Service met at the home of Mrs. Raymond Swayngim, at which time the group heard Mrs. David Stubbs, former missionary to Japan. Mrs. Stubbs conducted the Bible study course, the Society studying at present "The Divine Fahterhood," by Henry M. Bullock.

Mrs. Bullock told the group of her special interest in reviewing the book since her husband was a classmate of the author.

Mrs. Stubbs, her husband and small daughter left Japan a short time before the war started. Mr. Stubbs being sent to India as an active missionary, with Mrs. Stubbs and daughter returning to the United States. They saw the bombing of Pearl Harbor en route home.

In her talk Mrs. Stubbs assured the Society that there were many fine Christians in Japan even though the war had retarded the work in the missions for sometime to come.

It was agreed after the meeting that the study course was one of the most interesting ever taken by the Society.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Clark Messer recently moved to their home formerly owned by Orville Long, who recently moved into the home they purchased at the Hardy Liner sale.

The condition of Mrs. Will Jones who has been quite ill is much improved.
