Mayor Myrick Participates in Jerusalem Conference

Mayors from as far apart as Oak Park, Mich. and Conception, Chile met at the annual Jerusalem Conference of Mayors which brought 24 mayors from 13 countries to Israel's capital in March.

They seemed to share Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's optimism over prospects for peace in the region since the end of the Persian Gulf War.

Charlotte Mayor Sue Myrick, who headed the U.S. delegation, presented Shamir with a resolution adopted by the U.S. Conference of Mayors praising Israel for its restraint in face of Iraqi missile attacks on its civilian population.

Shamir admitted that "it was not easy for us" but was possible because "our goals were identical to those of the anti-Iraq coalition. Our restraint was our contribution to the coalition victory."

On her first visit to Israel, Mayor Myrick was "very encouraged by the peaceful and comfortable atmosphere here." She expressed the opinion that, with the end of the Gulf crisis, many families from the Charlotte area will be visiting Israel on pilgrimages and private tours.

The theme of the week-long Conference in Israel, hosted by Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek, was "The City of Tomorrow — Planning for the 21st Century." The Jerusalem Mayors Conference, initiated 11 years ago, is sponsored by the American Jewish Congress and the U.S. Conference of Mayors. It is partly supported by the Marcy and Leona Chanin Foundation.

For the first time, the participants included mayors from Eastern Europe. Present were Erno Kolosvori of Gyor, Hungary, and Wilhelm Polte
