Secretary Harrell says it is almost certain that at least two thousand teachers will attend the Assembly this year. This association is deserving of the highest commendation in so creditably maintaining its organization these many years. The Caraleigh cotton mills of Raleigh are going to be enlarged by the addition 4,000 new spindles and 130 looms. This will make the total number of spindles 10,000. North Carolina has more cotton mills than any other State in the Union and they are on the rapid increase, and the beauty is that it is the rarest exception where they are not paying.

Mr. Walter Homan was among those who attended the Memorial services yesterday. He with his family spent the winter at Harbor Island but he is now on the eve of moving back to Morehead. He expects his family up this week and he intends to open the "Homan House" for boarders again this summer and also to run the refreshment pavilion on the beach the same as heretofore.

The fish Commission car, which went down to Morehead Saturday night, came back yesterday morning with its third cargo of live ocean fish for the World's Fair. Grand Chapter Officers.

A telegram to the JOURNAL at 7 p. m. yesterday evening from Mr. J. H. Hackburn now in Tarboro as a delegate to the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons and Grand Commandery Knight Templar, announces that the Grand Chapter has closed and gives the following list officers-elect:

Francis M. Moye, Grand High Priest; Henry I. Clark, Deputy Grand High Priest; Ferdinand Ulrich, Grand Scribe; Hugh J. Lovick, Grand Master Third Vail.

Two officers for New Berne out of the above list makes a very good proportion for our city.

HAZEN GRAY, Act. Agt.

Confederate Memorial Services.

The court house having previously had extra seats put in and been properly decorated for the occasion a large number of the citizens of New Berne and vicinity gathered at the court house at the appointed hour for the purpose of doing honor to the Confederate dead.

The programme as published was carried out very nicely, every feature being a pleasant success.

The oration of Captain James A. Bryan was admirable. It has been usual on Memorial occasions to eulogize a distinguished officer, or to speak in glowing terms of some corps, division or brigade; but the orator on this occasion had for his subject "The Private Soldier," and never was audience and speaker in more perfect accord. Nearly every sentence was applauded. Commencing with the siege of Jerusalem and reaching its grand climax in the war between the States, the great battles of the world passed in review and each had its crowning glory in the splendid achievements and heroic endurance of the private soldier.

What a theme for such an occasion! There was not one in the vast audience who was not bound in the ties of blood to the private soldier, and as the orator pictured him in the camp, upon the march and in the battle, every one felt that in the splendid portrayal he saw the features of a kinsman who had a place in the glorious picture. It was a touching appeal from heart to heart; an oration of thrilling eloquence and melting pathos.

Captain Bryan closed with a beautiful tribute to the patriotic women of the South. "The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world."

The exercises at the court house being over, those present formed in front of the court house and marched up Broad street and the macadamized road to the cemetery and at the Confederate monument, "The Guard Around the Tomb" was sung and the assembly dismissed with the benediction.

The decorations had been carefully prepared and were beautiful. Two crossed swords, one of white and one of red roses on the front of the monument greeted the eye as one entered the cemetery gate and a wreath was hanging at its summit.

Encircling the base of the monument were flowers in designs. On the South side was the State flag adopted and carried through the war. It was made of white and red roses and blue iris, above it formed of deutzia, a small white flower, was the year "1861."

On the north side of the monument formed of the same flowers, was the State flag now in use which was adopted in 1885. On the Union of this flag is the legend April 12, 1776, the day on which the provincial congress of North Carolina authorized its delegates in the Continental congress to declare independence it being the first of the colonies to take this advanced and decided step for liberty.
