THE JOURNAL

MEMORIAL FLOWERS.

EVELYN GUY LAMBERT.

Bring fairest flowers from woods and bowers
To lay on our soldiers' graves;
Let garlands bloom on every tomb
Where slumber our fallen braves.

Bring violets here for a soldier's bier,
As blue as our native skies:
And roses red as the blood they shed,
Shall symbol their sacrifice.

Bring lilies white as the snow-drift light,
For the honor they kept so pure;
Bright laurels twine with the evergreen pine,
For their fame shall aye endure.

AT THE TRYST.

J. L. KENNAIRD.

List, night-birds, hush! soft winds be still;
Hark! while I make my moan;
There in her mansion on the hill
My lady lives alone.
Down in the valley, come to me;
Here, while the tryst I keep;
Darkness, and silence, and mystery,
Haste, thy lady, sweet.

"Listen, the serenade!
Come then, my gentle maid!
Dark is the lonely glade—
Thou art not near."

Night-bird's call, soft winds are sighing;
Moonlight breaks far o'er the sea;
List! and hush! soft steps are flying
To join the woodland's symphony.
Hasten and hasten; oh, dove, thy soft cooing
Hast changed since that gentle moan;
Hasten and hasten, for while I am wooing,
The soft winds sigh alone!

"List, then the serenade
Come, thou, my gentle maid!
Bright is the dewy glade—
For thou art here."

Mistaken Identity.

I remember a verse which ran something like this:

If you are sad, then take a bath.
Your health it cannot hurt:
For what you think to be despair,
Is very often dirt.

And true enough it is in some cases, I am sure.

I will add that what you mistake for despair is often dyspepsia.

Yes, even what many people look upon as remorse and conscience is only our old foe—I was just about to say friend—dyspepsia.

And when it is got rid of, how bright is the sunshine, how clear the air, how cheerful seems the future, until you stumble over some more hot biscuit, or lobster a la Newburg, or Welsh rarebit, and fall again.—N. Y. Recorder.

A Favorite for Coughs and Colds.

Whooping cough is not dangerous when this remedy is freely given, as it liquefies the tough mucus and makes it easier to expectorate. 25 and 50 cent for sale by J. V. Jordan Druggists.
