Temple Israel

ily. Attendees enjoyed a traditional Shabbat meal, joining together in joyful Shabbat song and thanking God for the blessings which Temple Israel has received over the last ten decades. Friday evening services were highlighted by a very stirring address by Rabbi Morton Leifman.

Shabbat morning services, conducted by Rabbi Murray Ezring and Cantor Elias Rookhvarg, were enhanced by the remarks of Justin Weininger and a major address by Rabbi Jerome Epstein. The festivities continued into the evening as Temple Israel, 500 strong, gathered together with its friends at the Marriott Uptown, where a gala party celebrating this milestone took place.

The music was provided by the Bo Thorpe Orchestra. Dancing lasted into the evening and a great time was enjoyed by all. The centennial celebration at Temple Israel continued into the week when Temple Israel hosted the Interfaith Thanksgiving service, sponsored by the National Council of Christians and Jews, representing the diversity of the faith community here in Charlotte.

For a hundred years Temple Israel has represented the best of Torah Judaism in the Charlotte community. What better way could there be to commemorate the 100th anniversary of a synagogue than to write a new Torah. Temple Israel centered its endowment campaign around the writing of a new Sefer Torah. The Centennial Torah, commissioned last year, was completed on September 17 at Temple Israel. That day, Rabbi Moshe Klein came to Charlotte, along with his quill pens and kosher ink, to help each family to take part in the writing.

Temple Israel continues to grow and endure through its dedication to Conservative Judaism and Torah. As the next century begins at Temple Israel, we celebrate with our newest B'nai Mitzvah, births and members. We congratulate Micah Monosoff, son of Roberta and Murray Monosoff, and Sarah Yeskel, daughter of Elka and Fil Yeskel, on being the first to celebrate their B'nai Mitzvah in Temple Israel's second century.

We welcome with joy the following new arrivals: Jacob Alan Fremderman, son of Jill and Bruce Fremderman of Charlotte, born November 1. Grandparents are Carl Nevard of Toronto, Canada and Eileen and Gerald Fremderman of Vestal, New York. Mia Danielle Cremisi, daughter of Jocie and Henry Cremisi of Charlotte, born November 2. Grandparents are Diane and Michael Steiner of Palm Beach, Florida and Ingrid and Al Cremisi of Boynton Beach, Florida. Great grandparents are Mildred and Carl Martin of North Palm Beach, Florida and Margherita Cremisi of Boca Raton, Florida.

And welcome our newest members: Mr. & Mrs. Sheldon Lang, Mr. and Mrs. Avri Beeri, Ms. Audrey Weil, Mr. & Mrs. Dana Goldfarb and Dr. & Mrs. Gerald B. Rosen.

Temple Israel Book Club meetings are open to all members of the Jewish community. They are held once a month on a Monday at 7:00 P.M. "Drop in's" are welcome. Call Linda Levy at (h)366-6362 (w) 377-8982 or Micki Schifman at 364-0041 if you have any questions. Watch this column for announcements of upcoming selections.
