

CJDS Castle Fair is a Royal Affair

Hear Ye! Hear Ye! Charlotte Jewish Day School fourth graders put on the third annual "Castle Fair" last month in the school cafeteria. Visitors admired the elaborate and realistic castle displays made of cardboard, graham crackers, and everything in between. As part of their study of medieval times and Sid Fleischman's The Whipping Boy, students were charged with designing and constructing a castle complete with drawbridges, towers, moats, crenellations, coats of arms, portcullises, dungeons, and bailey walls. The young knights and fair ladies spent three weeks exploring medieval architecture, health and medicine, economics, housing, government, religion, and food. Students concluded with oral presentations describing their "engineering" techniques and research findings. Until next year ... fare thee well! ☆
