Wildacres, Aug 13-16: Spectacular Mountain Setting, Kosher Food. Speakers, Live Music

By Maxine Ershler Carr

Wildacres Retreat with its spectacular Blue Ridge Mountain views is the site of the B'nai B'rith Institute of Judaism, now in its 65th continuous year held vide daytime relaxation. But some say the best part of Wildacres is schmoozing with friends on a porch rocking chair overlooking the mountains.

The all-inclusive cost is $350

A variety of entertainers will perform at Wildacres, August 13-16.

annually at Wildacres Conference Center in Little Switzerland, NC. One inclusive cost covers kosher meals, three speakers, live music, patio discussions, and two bedded rooms with private baths.

The speakers are Analia Bortz who in addition to being a rabbi is also a medical doctor and a bioethicist; Maggie Anton, author of the "Rashi's Daughters" trilogy; and Dr. Lisa Pollard, an expert on Egypt. Rabbi Bortz's topics include Israel: Shaping a New Society; Robotization of the New Generation; Dysfunctional Characters in the Bible; and Women in our Tradition: From Torah to Kitchen to Career. Among Maggie Anton's topics are The Importance of Rashi in Jewish History; The Truth about Jews in the Middle Ages and All of Rashi's Daughters. Lisa Pollard, from the History Department of UNC Wilmington, has topics that include Arab Spring; Contributions of Jews to Modern Egypt; and Facebook in the Middle East: Perspective on Social Networks.

Three local bluegrass groups will provide live music in the evenings. Nature trails, a library, horseshoes, ping-pong, free tennis lessons, cards, and mah jongg proper person for two in a room and $490 for a single. Needs-based scholarships are available to seniors living in NC or SC.

For registration forms or more information go to www.wildacres.org, or contact Bill Carr at bcarr@ipass.net or 919-781-4207. ☆
