

Levine-Sklut Judaic Library and Resource Center

New Project at the Library Mazel Tov to Our Newest Melton Graduates

The Levine-Sklut Judaic Library is embarking on an exciting new project and we need your input

The Levine-Sklut Judaic Library is currently exploring the possibility of establishing a Center for Holocaust and Tolerance Education to serve as a clearinghouse for the diverse and valuable Holocaust educational resources this community offers.

As the region's only Judaic resource center, the Levine-Sklut Judaic Library regularly fields inquiries from our community and beyond about the Holocaust, how to teach it, and how to make this complex topic relevant in today's classrooms. Currently there is no centralized source of information on local Holocaust resources; the creation of a Center for Holocaust and Tolerance Education would provide a single point of access for all things related to the Holocaust for the greater Charlotte community. By coordinating and consolidating information about full breadth of the region's opportunities, the Library can do what a Library does best – connect patrons with the resources that most effectively meet their needs.

Thanks to a generous grant from Stan Greenspon, the Library has convened an exploratory commission that will investigate the possibilities and options of a potential Center for Holocaust and Tolerance Education in Charlotte. A Library Board Task Force will conduct the research, and an important part of the process is soliciting input and feedback from our constituents, educators and the public about how such a Center could be most valuable, accessible and useful to you. Please assist us in our efforts by taking a few minutes to complete this brief survey that can be found at our website www.lsjl.org. ☆

On June 1, we will celebrate the following students who will have completed their two years of study at The Florence Melton School of Adult Jewish Learning-Charlotte: Rick Abrams, Caren Carr, Beth Davis, Marcy Dumas, David Epstein, Joanne Gold DeMaria, Andrea Kabat, Paula Klein, Leonard Marco, Jean Moats, Judy Morganstein, Kathy Ochs, Gail Rubenstein, Janice Zacks, and Sam Zimmern. Please join us as we honor them all at a Graduation Ceremony and Celebration Party on June 1, 11 AM-1 PM in Lerner Hall.
