SYNAGOGUES & CONGREGATIONS

Temple Solel Joins URJ

Temple Solel, the Reform congregation in Fort Mill, has announced its affiliation with the Union of Reform Judaism. In doing so, they become one of a small number of congregations who are members of both URJ and ISJL (Institute of Southern Jewish Life).

In making the announcement, James Fox, President, said, "The endless resources of both of these organizations will enhance our services, enrich our Religious School, and help guide a variety of congregation activities. We're in a great spot as we head toward our High Holiday services."

Temple Solel's Lay Leaders, Edie Yakutis and Russ Cobe, have already benefited from the affiliation, having just returned from an extensive Lay Leader education program in Wisconsin.

The ISJL membership provides the congregation with a Torah, visits from knowledgeable ISJL Fellows, and an outstanding curriculum for the congregation's religious education program.

In addition to religious school, the Temple also plans to add a confirmation class as well as adult education.

As has been the case for the last three years, Temple Solel will be holding its High Holiday services on the campus of St. Philip Neri Catholic Church. A detailed schedule for all services can be found on the congregation's website at templesolelsc.org and in this edition of CJN. Once again, there is no charge for members, students, or members of the Armed Forces. Services are open to nonmembers for a cost of $50 (covering all HH services). Any questions regarding High Holidays or general membership can be directed to the Roy and Wendy Weinberger at 803-619-9707.✪
