OUR HONOR ROLL

Our boys are being rapidly discharged from the military service of our country, and are returning to take their places in the equally important fields of the trades, industries, and professions. So we present herewith a new Honor Roll, which we hope our readers will help us to make and keep correct and complete. It is the roll of former soldiers who are now employed in Badin, both by the Tallasse Power Company and by other businesses. We keep the first place, however, for our honored dead.

The Fourth in Badin

Are you in favor of a sane and safe Fourth? Do you enjoy a day that is free from the old-time noise, free from the frenzied yappings of the eagle when some ambitious orator spreads himself and the bird over dead and buried issues and events? When your fingers and those of your neighbor's small boy were not burned with "fizz" firecrackers or the back fire of rockets that refused to go forward? If so, the Independence Day that has just passed in Badin was one that you will remember. Anyhow, that's the kind of Fourth Badinites enjoyed, and everyone was tired, dusty, contented, knew his neighbor and his viewpoint better, and tolerated that neighbor, yea, even unto his chickens, his phonograph, and larger salary, with more grace than before. In fact it was a day on which "Personal Relations" was an entrant, and easy winner, in every event.

First, to the Lake Side where H. R. Wake was Master of Ceremonies. The canoes were lined up for a start—Dubose, Moorman, Neubling, and Giersch wore a tense look. At the signal, their paddles scared the fishes. Shades of Deerslayer and all other expert canoeists who have gone before! How their frail craft leaped into (I forget—'twas only for an hundred yards, and the Dubose-Moorman outfit won before the thought could frame itself.)

The boys' swimming race was proof that the youngsters could make excuses or dodge the maternal eye for practice, for the shoal were well bunched at the finish. Bud Coffman, however, is now seeing fifteen "Movies" because he flapped over the line in the lead. Robert

Mr. Frederic Cummings
Managing Editor BADIN BULLETIN
Badin, N. C.

My Dear Mr. Cummings:—A few days past I received the following communication:

Mr. R. F. G.
Office

At a meeting of the BADIN BULLETIN staff last week, it was suggested that perhaps you could write a good history on Badin Dogs. It was suggested that you call it "A Badin Dog Tale" (the idea being that there are all kinds of dogs in town, each very valuable from its owner's point of view, and some greatly in disfavor with their neighbors). Please see what you can do along this line.
