

Cadets Perform In Washington Tonight

Cadet Dance Held Tonight

The second in the series of cadet hops scheduled for the first Saturday of each month will be held tonight to the swingy rhythm of tunes played by the Pre-Flight orchestra under the direction of M. L. Wall, Jr., Mus.1c.

The time: 2030 to 2315.

The place: Woollen Gymnasium.

The regiment of cadets is reminded that smoking is taboo on the gym floor, but is permitted in the passageways and on the terrace.

As on the previous occasion, Oct. 3, the dances will be primarily TAG dances, thereby insuring a rapid turnover in partners.

Liquid refreshments will be served free.

Taps for those attending the dance will be at 2400.

What to Expect With Blind Dating

By CADET HILLARY WAUGH

With "Cadet Hops" becoming monthly affairs, it may be well to explain the intricacies of the blind date system to many new cadets.

It's the Saturday morning of the dance and as usual the future is very dark. Suddenly the CMOD in his customary raucous voice attracts everyone to the hallway in the prescribed manner. Waving a sheet of paper in his hand, he tells everyone who is interested in a blind date for the dance to sign up. You, having had some similar matching experiences in the past, hesitate momentarily, but finally, in the hope—it springs eternally—that you might get some Queen, you add your name to the list and the mate tells you to report to Alderman Hall by 2020 at the latest.

At the appointed time, you put in your appearance expecting to find the girl to whom you've been assigned waiting for you. But your entrance causes no flurry, and no wonder for there is a mass of struggling cadets over in one corner.

Joining the crowd you find one girl in the middle. She has a list of the available girls, but no list of boys. Also the girl's list is not very long. However, you are not to be denied and fight your way through and get your name placed opposite that of some girl. This girl's name is Kitty, which doesn't sound the least discouraging so you sit tight, always keeping near the young lady with the list, as does everyone else.

One girl, a neat number, comes down and you hope her name is Kitty. It isn't.

Some other fellow is told his date's at a sorority party and won't be free till later, so he leaves and you smile. Then you're informed that Kitty has another date for the evening.

However, since some of the other less persevering cadets have given up, you try to get another girl, but no more seem to be had. There are some really cute ones sitting around the lounge, but they aren't dressed for

At No Cost to Them

Cadets To Receive Pre-Flight Booklet

Pictures of all phases of cadet life at the Pre-Flight School here are included in a colorful modernly designed souvenir booklet which has just been published through the cooperation of Merin-Baliban, Philadelphia photographers, with the Public Relations Office. These booklets will be distributed free to all cadets who attend the school, and to the officials of this station.

Included in the 32 pages are places for the cadet to place his own photograph and a picture of his platoon. There is also a place for his record, and for autographs of his friends, and miscellaneous snapshots.

A sleek Navy plane bursting through the clouds is portrayed in brown and gold colors on the cover. Among the individual photographs contained in the booklet are those of Vice Admiral John N. Tower, formerly chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, recently appointed Commander Air Forces, Pacific Fleet; Capt. Arthur W. Radford, director of the aviation training division, Bureau of Aeronautics, and Comdr. Thomas J. Hamilton, head of Pre-Flight and physical training division of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Pictures of Comdr. O. O. Kessing, commanding officer of this station, and his staff are followed by those of officers of the physical training staff. Camera views of swimming, hand-to-hand combat and wrestling, football, basketball, gym tumbling, boxing, mass exercise, military track, baseball, tests and measurements, and the training department are included in this section.

The military department, with action scenes, is followed by photographs of the academic department, and pictures of Comdr. Jesse G. Wright, senior medical officer, and his department.

The center of the booklet is given over to interesting scenes from local cadet life. Pictures of the graduation exercises for the First Battalion and scenes about the campus conclude the booklet.

The men from every unit on the base are being photographed individually, and each man will eventually receive a copy of the booklet free. Cadets who have already been graduated will receive their copies of the booklet at their flight base.

To Exhibit Pre-Flight For Grid Fans

Ninety Chapel Hill Pre-Flight cadets are scheduled to demonstrate results of their intensive and varied physical training between halves of the Cloudbuster-Georgetown football game being played tonight under the lights in Griffith Stadium, Washington, D. C.

The group is composed of a drill platoon from the 9th Battalion, under the direction of Lieut. Robert D. Robinson, and 50 other cadets who will participate in mass athletic activities. Lieut. Charles Speidel, head wrestling coach, is in charge of the latter group.

The cadets are making the trip, explains Lt. Comdr. Harvey J. Harman, director of athletics, to give Navy officials and Washington football fans at the game a sample view of some of the activities in the Pre-Flight program.

What a Request!

A 'BUSTER bouquet is herewith handed to members of the 7th Battalion.

Last week a member of this group called the OD's office at Alexander shortly before taps, and asked if he and about 10 of his mates could get up at 0330 and study for some exams the following day.

Taken by surprise the OD didn't know what to say at first, but finally decided if they were that interested in doing their work well they should certainly be granted their wishes. So the cadets did their studying in the wee hours of the morning.

We didn't check with the academic department on the grades made by the 7th Battalion last week. If effort counts, though, there should have been some pretty high marks.

Navy Infirmary Will Be Opened Early in December

The new $192,000 Pre-Flight infirmary is expected to be ready for Navy occupancy in early December, Comdr. Jesse Wright, senior medical officer, announced this week.

Already completed are the essential parts of the framework, and workmen are now installing water and gas mains, heating and lighting lines, flooring and roofing.

Completely fireproof, the three-story brick building is planned for comfort and convenience, and is to be supplied with the most modern medical equipment available. Its designed capacity is 50 beds, but this number can be increased readily, for under the present plan the building is very spacious.

Built in Georgian style and facing Kenan Stadium, the new infirmary will be back-to-back with the present University Medical building. The ambulance entrance will be in the rear, connecting with the present drive, while the north end will be used as the entrance for the cadets.

On the ground floor the reception room is located just inside the cadet entrance, next to the record room. This floor will handle most of the infirmary activities, as it houses the doctors' offices, examination rooms, pharmacy, laboratory and dental clinic, where a staff of three dentists will be located. On the second floor are both single rooms and small wards, the private rooms being ranged along the east face. Above on the third floor are the operating rooms, along with more private and ward beds. These floors are served by an elevator and three stairways.

Heat will be supplied from the University's central heating plant.

When finished the infirmary will provide centralization for all sick bay activities. At present the main medical offices are located on the second floor of Alexander, and patients have been staying at the University infirmary or at Watts hospital in Durham.

Dr. Hartsough Finds Car Stolen from Lt. Greene

By CADET H. WESLEY BOGLE

Lieut. C. W. Hartsough, Jr., of the Medical Corps, proved to be an excellent sleuth last week when he recovered Lieut. Edwin W. Greene's automobile in Durham.

The car, a 1940 Ford convertible, had been stolen on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 24, while Lieut. Greene and his two children were attending the football game between the Camp Davis and Cloudbuster 'B' teams in Kenan Stadium.

The theft was discovered immediately after the game and although a general alarm was sent out by the local police, no trace of the vehicle was found until Wednesday, Oct. 28, when Dr. Hartsough found the car in Durham.

He notified Lieut. Greene who arrived with the Durham police. Fingerprints were taken but as yet no trace of the culprits has been found.

Missing from the car was a tire, tube, rim, gas ration book, and car registration. Found in the car was an almost empty bottle of Old Drum whisky.

"Some people have the idea that there is little here in the way of sports but football," Lt. Comdr. Harman stated. "We want the people in Washington and the nation to know that we are preparing the Pre-Flight cadets to become the toughest fighting pilots in the world."

There will be an eighteen minute program at halftime. During the first five minutes 100 new V-5 Cadets will be officially sworn in. They will march on the field behind the Navy band.

Next the drill platoon will take the spotlight and give a seven minute drill, similar to the excellent exhibition at the last outdoor Smoker.

Then the cadets participating in the mass physical drill will perform at each end of the field. One group will start out playing soccer, and the other will box. After several minutes the soccer group will start tumbling, and the boxing group will wrestle.

Both groups will then take basketballs and weave and dribble between one another to the obstacle course which has been built around the football field. After they run over the 10 obstacles, the program will be completed.

The drill platoon has been practicing since Oct. 22. Out of the 50 cadets only three had ever handled rifles before.

"We have made very rapid progress," Lieut. Robbie Robinson stated Thursday, "and the boys are to be congratulated for their cooperative spirit. They have been drilling two hours a day, one hour of which has been on their own time."

Those making the trip to participate in the mass physical drill are: F. J. Frantel, A. B. Sale, E. Wanca, J. E. MacDougall, R. H. Buettner, H. H. Adams, H. A. McKee, G. R. Lemire, M. Zanger, P. W. Newman, R. S. Mullancy, C. J. Sipp, W. R. Gandley, R. E. Benson, V. J. Zaro, P. J. Pappas, C. W. Schold, S. Kallaway, B. R. C. Daignault, C. L. Cochran, L. Horvath, W. J. Noctor, D. R. Robertson, W. M. Sloan, H. L. Thompson, E. J. Artnak, R. E. Crandall, L. B. Hoffman, R. C. Knoechel, J. O. Conway, D. R. Lowry,
