Although Piedmont had a 21 percent growth in man-hours worked and a 15 percent increase in departures in 1987, our employee safety record for the year was one of the best in the industry. To honor the employees involved in obtaining that record, a Piedmont Airlines Employee Safety Award program was established in 1986.

On hand for the presentation of the awards for 1987 were (l to r) George Mason, vice president-maintenance and engineering; Jim Swartz, director-ground safety; Harlie Gordon, staff vice president-base maintenance; J.P. Richardson, president of IAMAW; Bill Crowson, co-chairperson of the safety committee; Al Beamon, director-maintenance control and technical services; and Mike Herron, chairperson of the safety committee. Gordon accepted the Speedbird Safety Award for ROA-MM which worked the most man-hours and recorded the best performance rating. Richardson represented EWR-MM which worked the most man-hours without a lost-time injury. Beamon accepted the award for MIA-MM which had the most improved lost-time performance. Mason represented the maintenance department which had the best overall safety performance in the Company.

Other maintenance locations with no lost-time injuries during 1987 included ATL, BOS, BUF, EWR, FAY, JFK, MCO, MEM, RDU, ROC, SDF, SYR, and the GSO Avionics Shop. Twenty-nine stations reported no lost-time injuries during 1987: AGS, AVL, AZO, BGM, BTV, CAE, CHA, CHO, CMI, ELM, EVV, EYW, FWA, GNV, GSP, HTS, ILM, ISO, ITH, LYH, MEM, MSP, ORH, PBI, PVD, SAV, STL, TYS, and UCA. BNARO and general aviation at BLT and INT were also recognized for their accomplishments.

Additional Speedbird Safety Awards were presented to the following stations in passenger services: RDU for working the greatest number of man-hours and exceeding performance goal; ILM for working the most man-hours without a lost-time injury; and DFW for the most improved lost-time injury performance. MIA catering received the award for the most improved lost-time performance. Among the flight attendant bases, SYR worked the most hours and recorded the best performance rating.
