Mother

Be kind to your mother—
She may be old and grey,
Oh, how you will miss her
When she is taken away!

She may seem old and childish
And set in her ways,
But you must remember
She has seen better days.

She has spent many restless nights
Watching over your bed,
Wondering if her baby is sick,
Feeling of your head.

Bring all your troubles to mother,
She knows just what to do,
She is always ready to listen,
It may seem strange to you.

Some day when you are old and grey
And your feet fail to go,
You wonder why you said hard things
To mother long ago.

So tell your mother all your troubles,
Share with her your smiles,
For she might not be with you
But just a little while.
