BATH BELIEVED DANGEROUS

Bathing was not considered as essential at one time as it is now. In fact, lots of our ancestors were considerably shocked when the bathtub was first introduced to this country. In Boston and other parts of New England a bath was believed to be so dangerous a doctor's prescription was necessary—and most medicines wouldn't give it. Virginia imposed a state tax on bathtubs some 85 years ago and Philadelphia once prohibited the use of a tub for bathing purposes.

RECALLS HER VISIT TO MRS. CLEVELAND

Mrs. Daniels, While On Honeymoon, Called On First Lady 46 Years Ago

Washington, May 3.—The Ambassador to Mexico and Mrs. Joseph Daniels, who have been "in official life" in three Democratic administrations, celebrated their 46th wedding anniversary yesterday as White House guests.

And today, Mrs. Daniels told how they came to Washington from North Carolina on their honeymoon and were received at the White House by Mrs. Grover Cleveland, herself scarcely more than a bride, having been married two years before, June 2, 1886.

"It would make a pretty story if we could say we had been White House guests on both occasions," said Mrs. Daniels. "But truth compels me to say, we merely called on the Clevelands. Later, we came here to live."

Mrs. Daniels said she and her husband had kept their wedding anniversary so quiet their hosts, the Roosevelts, did not know about it.
