GOLF IN THE CLOUDS

Approximately 100 golfers from the southeast arrived at Lee's Motel Inn June 9 for the Third Annual "Golf in the Clouds" tournament.

The event was played at the Highlands Country Club Golf Course and the Sapphire Valley Inn Golf Course.

The golfers left June 12 after completing the tournament.

CAMP HIGHLANDER OPENING

Camp Highlander for boys, owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Wax, will be opening for the season on June 22nd. The staff arrived this week and the entire camp is busily preparing for the opening.

The camp expects to entertain 132 boys from an area covering nine states.

The Winter Scene
by Ella Cabe

Winter's icy grip held a firm rein on the mountains this winter. Four and five-foot snowdrifts became the rule rather than the exception in and around the Highlands area. Small children had to stay close indoors for fear of disappearing completely in the soft white blankets that spread over the terrain as far as the eye could reach.

It seemed, to the people who were shut in by it, that the snow came down forever, but it was actually only a month or two. For ice-skating and bob-sledding enthusiasts it was heaven, but for less hardy individuals it was a time to curl up by a nice, warm fire with a favorite novel, perhaps Whittier's "Snowbound?"

The constantly accumulating snow caused many hazards for the small towns in the far reaches of the mountain areas. Road hazards were prevalent over the entire Eastern coast, but in these hamlets nestled in the Blue Ridge it spelled disaster. Many of the towns, especially Max's Patch, were declared disaster areas and helicopters were sent out to drop food and other necessities to the snow-bound inhabitants, many of whom were shut in for weeks without news of the outside world.

However, despite the hardships it brought to the mountain people, the snow and ice did create a magnificent pano-
