Sixtieth Convocation Held

Convocation services for the 60th academic session at Atlantic Christian College were held here Sept. 14 with Dr. Millard P. Burt, dean, presiding.

Speaker for the event was Dr. Arthur D. Wenger, ACC president, who told the gathering, "In order to derive the maximum benefit from a college experience it is essential that we have clearly defined purposes. We must understand the world in which we live recognizing the fact that it is not an ideal world; we must prepare ourselves for roles of useful leadership in that world."

"In college there is no longer room for a frivolous, lackadaisical approach to our work. A college education today represents a substantial investment. No student can afford the luxury of purposeless meandering through academic courses.

"While it is appropriate that we take stock of the purpose which has made us a part of this academic community here at Atlantic Christian College early in the year, it is even more important that we constantly review those purposes which motivate our work.

"The chief aim of a college education is not so much the accumulation of factual data; rather, it is an earnest attempt to illuminate those facts. It seeks to enable the student to develop a capacity for making intelligent choices and sound commitments.

"To this end not only those who are members of our student body here but society as well have made far reaching investments.

"Each of us, whether student or faculty member, owes it to himself and to humanity to use wisely the opportunities which these investments make possible for us."

"Dr. Wenger was introduced by Dean Burt, the scripture lesson and pastoral prayer was by Prof. W. E. Tucker, the litany was led by Daniel Hensley. The organ prelude and recessional was by Prof. Gene Featherstone and the benediction was given by Prof. Daniel MacFarland.
