Officers Elected At First Meeting Of Pi Alpha Group

Pi Alpha, the political Science Club, held its first meeting on Tuesday, September 25, at 8:30. The business consisted of two main issues; first, a study of the requirements to become a member of the club — one, at least three hours in Political Science and two, an interest in political and world events, also an interest in government of school and of the community.

Second, the idea of a debating team concerned with timely issues in politics was discussed.

The program consisted of a report on the N. E. A. congress, held this summer in Columbus, Ohio. Sandra Freeman and E. B. Shearin were delegates to this congress.

The new officers are: president, June Burwell; vice-president, John Cox; and secretary-treasurer, Tommy Pierson.

The book under the editorship of Nolan Miller and Judson Jerome features "The best recent fiction and poetry from the Colleges and Universities of America."

Mrs. Mackinnon's poem, entitled "After Reading An Article On Success," was written and submitted three years ago. Besides her poem four other works by graduates of ACC were included in the volume. The students were: Sanford Peele, John C. Vernon, Anne W. Nelson, and Lewis Creech.

College Band Has Full Year Planned

The ACC Band begins its 1962-63 season with high hopes for a full program of activities. The Band is composed of forty-five pieces. "In addition to an increase in size, the quality of the individual players has improved," reports Neal O'Neal, the Band's director.

The Band has tentatively scheduled an entertaining pops concert the latter part of November. The ACC Marching Band is slated to appear in several local and out of town parades. In its public appearances, the Bulldog Marching Band will be fronted by its attractive, new majorette corp, headed by Marilyn Bryant of Jacksonville, N. C.

ing poetic talent in the college classroom is best illustrated by the five young poets from Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, North Carolina. This crest of poetic creativity may well be evident because the sensitive and sympathetic teacher has worked with them. She is Mildred E. Hartsock.

"For Miss Hartsock as well as many other excellent teachers the editors are greatly indebted. If New Campus Writing is always a new experience with each issue, the continuing wave of serious students, of teachers working so devotedly with them, makes possible a future for American Writing that will always be abundant, varied, and exciting."

The magazine is published at three year intervals by the Grove Press in New York.
