ACC Board Of Trustees Holds Meeting; Steps Made To Amend College Charter

WILSON — The Board of trustees of Atlantic Christian College at its annual Mid-Winter meeting held here Feb. 27, took steps to revise the college's charter, nominate several new members for election to its own body, promoted a number of faculty members in academic rank and granted additional funds to the institution's athletic program.

Following an extensive study of the institution's charter, the board adopted a resolution presented by a special charter study committee which will bring the charter up to date. The charter had been amended on five different occasions and had become cumbersome and unwieldy. Among other things, the proposed charter revision eliminated the clause which has limited students at Atlantic Christian to those of the Caucasian race. The resolution must be ratified by the N. C. Convention of Christian Churches which will meet in Washington, N. C. April 24-26.

Vacancies On Board

Action was taken to nominate five new members to fill vacancies which exist on the AC Board of Trustees. Nominated were William D. Schubert of Winston-Salem, vice president of the P. H. Hanes Knitting Co.; Rev. T. J. Youngblood, pastor of Hillyer Memorial Christian Church, Raleigh; W. C. Howard Andrews, Rocky Mount businessman; Rev. Robert G. Hufford, minister of the First Christian Church, Asheville; and Albert J. Bows, senior operating partner, Arthur Anderson Col., public accountants, Atlanta, Ga.

Operating Budget

The board approved a tentative operating budget for the college's 1964-65 academic year in the amount of $1,144,000.

Atlantic Christian's athletic program was given a substantial boost when the board approved a budget increase of $5,000. The increase in funds was granted on the basis of recommendations made by the board's Athletic Committee. The funds will be used to strengthen the college's intercollegiate athletic program in all sports in which the college participates including basketball, baseball, track, tennis and golf. A number of the college's faculty were promoted in academic rank by the board.

State Student Legislature Repeals Speaker Ban Law

The Student Legislature of North Carolina — after lengthy and occasionally eloquent discussion — passed a resolution Thursday calling for repeal of the Communist speaker ban law.

Bill Eyerman of Lillington, a student at East Carolina College, was elected president of the Senate. Mike Lawler of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was chosen speaker of the House.

It was announced that the 240 Negro and white students were holding their first meeting in which housing is integrated. The students are staying at the Carolina Hotel.

The speaker ban repeal resolution was introduced at the opening session of the group at the Capitol shortly after an address by Gov. Sanford.

George Archibald of Chowan College introduced the measure on behalf of his school, Greensboro College and East Carolina College.

The Resolution

The resolution, which passed unanimously after deletion of one portion, stated in part:

"...the college student is at an age where he should be faced with the views of a Communist, as well as those of a member of our own system so that he can properly and prudently differentiate and analyze the two systems, their points of view, and their methods of presentation. . ."

Archibald, who told the group he had lived in several nations abroad, including England, "entrenched in socialism," said the State Legislature "put its feet in an area where it should not have stepped" when it passed the law prohibiting Communists, and persons taking the Fifth Amendment because of subversive backgrounds, from speaking on campuses of State-supported colleges.

Archibald read several editorials from North Carolina newspapers and accounts of dissent from Dr. William Friday, president of UNC, and former UNC president Gordon Gray.

Said Archibald: "A college or university is a forum where impartial truth and knowledge must be heard."

Other bills, some of them controversial in nature, scheduled for introduction in the coming two days of the Student Legislature include one which would give the Governor veto power; one which would ban the flying of the Confederate

Model UN Attended By ACC Students

On February 12th through the 15th four students from Atlantic Christian attended the Model U. N. General Assembly at Duke University. The students who attended were Gina Allen, Kathy Traylor, Nam Cho Park, and Dwight Wagner. Mr. Gordon Mercer accompanied the group as faculty advisor.

The ACC delegation represented the group as faculty advisor. The purpose of the Model U. N. General Assembly was to recreate as closely as possible the actual workings of the United Nations in New York. The issues debated were of a very complicated nature, and proceedings were conducted by strict parliamentary procedure.

This was the first year Atlantic Christian had participated in this event, and the ACC delegation regarded it as a learning session. Members of the delegation said that they had learned a great deal about conditions in the world and are looking forward to next year's session.

Consideration Pleaded For Negro Entertainers

The Executive Board of the Co-operative Association of Atlantic Christian College adopted a resolution Monday night urging the administration and cooperative organizations to give more serious consideration in allowing student Negro entertainers to eat in the campus cafeteria.

The motion was introduced by Richard Surles, Sophomore class president, as a result of an incident Saturday night when The Dynamics, a Negro group from Johnson C. Smith University, who were scheduled for a Freshman Class dance, were refused service. Surles stated, "If the Administration would use more forethought ACC might be spared future embarrassment."

The resolution stated, "It seems unchristian of this church-related institution to deny this right in consideration of the recent position taken by the Board of Trustees." Opposition to the resolution was offered by Robert Bennett, dean of students, however, the motions passed by a seven to six margin with two abstentions.

A report was given by Sammy Jones, president of the Men's Dormitory Association, listing those competing for Executive Board offices for the coming academic year. They are: President, Lee Horne; Vice President, Richard Surles and Freddie Hale; Secretary, Cookie Wickham and Judy Lee; Treasurer, Randy Smart, Ruth Ann Tyson, Bob Harrigan and Stuart Raynor.

Four girls were nominated to compete for Head Cheerleader for next year. They are Annette Banks, Gina Allen, Linda Burgess and Kathryn Webb.

In other action it was announced that a record player is under repair for use in the cafeteria in the near future.
