Some 275,000 Students Lose Funds

WASHINGTON (CPS) — An estimated 275,000 students have lost the opportunity to collect up to $90 a month in cash benefits as a result of the demise by stalemate of proposed social security legislation.

The failure, because of a dispute over medicare, of a House-Senate conference committee to reach agreement on the final form of a social security expansion bill killed a program for aiding some 18 to 22-year-old students.

The bill was a casualty of Congressional adjournment fever, which was running high after a nine-month session and with the election only four weeks away.

The current social security act provides payments of up to $90 a month for each child under 18 whose father is deceased, disabled, or retired. A proposed amendment to the act would have continued payments to those who became full-time college students.

Students in vocational, junior, private or public colleges would have received payments until their 22nd birthday.

The "child benefits" were to be extended to students on the theory that full-time students over 18 are as financially dependent as children under 18.

'She Stoops To Conquer' Set To Open On Tuesday

The rollicking, boisterous farce "She Stoops to Conquer" by Oliver Goldsmith will be presented in Howard Chapel at 8:15 on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday October 20th - 22nd by Stage and Script under the sponsorship of the Wilson Kiwanis Club.

Set in the same period as "Tom Jones," the play has all the 18th Century gusto associated with the classic book and film and has been called the finest comedy written in English. It was originally presented in London in 1773 and its first New York production was later that same year. It has been produced many times on Broadway with the most recent productions being in 1949 and 1960. So great is its popularity that it has been included in the cross country tour of the National Repertory Theater which is now appearing at the University of North Carolina - Greensboro.

"She Stoops to Conquer," one of the greatest and funniest of all comedies, deals with Marlow, a gentleman of fashion of London, who has been matched with Kate Harcastle, though they have never met. Marlow and his friend Hastings, on their way to the Harcastles, are directed to the house as an inn by the prankster Tony Lumpkin, Mrs. Harcastle's son by an earlier marriage. They are deceived into thinking Mr. Harcastle is the landlord and Kate a maid. Kate takes advantage of the misunderstandings to break down Marlow's reserve while Hastings and Miss Neville, Mrs. Harcastle's niece, plan an elopement and are abetted by Tony. A covey of inept servants and assorted drunks add to the merriment and the mistakes of the night are finally and pleasantly corrected at the final curtain.

Several players well-known to campus audiences are featured in the cast with George Farr appearing as Marlow, Fred Barber as Mr. Harcastle and Penny Kirk as Mrs. Harcastle. Rae Torrey, who is remembered for her performance as Dottie Coburn in "Out of The Fryteng Pan" appears in another "dizzy dame" role as Constance Neville. The leading female role of Kate Harcastle is being portrayed by new-comer Maureen Ryan with Fred Edwards, (Mr. Harcastle), Jack Tobin (Hastings), George

Miss Ward Discusses Co-Op At Executive Board Meeting

The Executive Board held its annual fall dinner Monday night at Parker's Restaurant. President Lee Horne introduced the guest speaker who was Miss Sarah B. Ward, Dean of Women.

The Cooperative Association was the topic of Miss Ward's speech, and she discussed some of its past history. She presented an old Collegiate which was dated 1936, and the paper's headlines stated that a Cooperative Association had been formed. The paper related that the College had adopted this system of government from a similar one used at Hood College in Maryland. Miss Ward commented that Mr. Milton Adams, present A. C. C. Business Manager, was the first President of the Co-op, and that she was the second President.

She concluded her speech by saying that she felt that it would be good to see a girl run for President, and that in any form of government you need the wisdom and age, and the experience of practice to achieve good government; no matter what form of government is in practice.

After Miss Ward's speech the Board moved into regular business. Kathy Traylor, Junior Senator, mov-

New Journal In Preparation

The Department of Art and Department of English have begun work on the new journal which they plan to launch in mid-December of this year. Assisted by a small student-staff, Arnold and Dr. Hartsock are now reading contributions which have already been submitted and are discussing lay-out and artwork.

The magazine will be the joint project of the two departments and will be financed by contributions, by sales, and by other means which will be announced later. The first issue will be made possible by the Doris Holsworth Memorial Fund. The magazine will be a printed one.

The editors hope to maintain a high quality of work, and they are eager to receive contributions from students, from faculty members, from administration or staff, from alumni, from the community, from anyone who is doing interesting work. Short stories, poems, plays, essays, reviews, musical compositions, drawing, paintings, good photography, architectural drawings, photographs of sculpture — all of these will be welcomed for consideration. A dead-line for the first issue has been set for November 1.

Those interested in submitting material may give it to Arnold or to Dr. Hartsock. Literary materials should be taken to the English Office on the second floor; art and musical contributions should be taken to the Art Office on the first floor of the Classroom Building.

THE ACC BULLDOGS began their first practice session last Monday afternoon at the Wilson Recreation Center. (Above) The Bulldogs are practicing defensive maneuvers, one part of several fundamentals used Monday. The first game is scheduled for November 28 at the Recreation Center when the team will host Catawba College. The Bulldogs will practice at the Center every afternoon except Tuesday on which the team will hold sessions in the college gym.

No Kidnapping

NORMAN, OKLA. (CPS) — The University of Oklahoma has prohibited kidnapping.

Under a new university rule, "any student who holds another person under physical constraint or causes this to be done shall be automatically suspended or dismissed from the University."

The university apparently imposed the ban because of an incident during an Engineering Week celebration last year which saw all the queen candidates kidnapped on the day of the engineers' ball.
