Four Running For Co-Op President

CC Ruling Prohibits Scholarship

An "informal" petition, which began circulating among the student body at ACC to raise funds for scholarships specifically for Negro applicants, has run into a stone wall.

The petition was stopped voluntarily when it was pointed out that such scholarships for recruiting athletes are in violation of Carolina Conference rulings.

The purpose of the petition movement was to set up a scholarship fund to be used to encourage Negro athletes to attend ACC. The move was initiated following a ruling by the Board of Trustees last week which stated that Negro athletes cannot be offered grants-in-aid as a means of enticement to

North Carolina Volunteers To Expand Program; Will Involve 250 Students

DURHAM — The North Carolina Fund this week starts a 56-campus recruiting drive for an expanded North Carolina Volunteers summer program involving college students in community action against poverty problems.

The 1965 Volunteers program involve 250 students. After a three-day orientation period, the students will form into teams of 15-20 students each, and moves into about 15 North Carolina communities.

In announcing the new Volunteers program, Terry Sanford, board chairman of the North Carolina Fund, said "The decision to run a new and expanded North Carolina Volunteers program this summer, reflects the outstanding achievements of the 100 students who worked so successfully in last year's program.

After talking with leaders from communities where Volunteers worked last year, we are convinced that college students can make significant, permanent contributions to community action programs in North Carolina communities.

This is the people - to - people part of the new move against poverty. It is an inspiring thing to see a college student willingly take his full vacation time to give a new feeling of hope to a child, to teach a class of adults to read and write, or to tramp through a neighborhood helping to improve their homes and make better places in which to live and rear their children."

Each North Carolina Volunteer team will work in a community that has made a specific request for Volunteers for this summer. The North Carolina Fund currently is inviting communities to submit proposals outlining their plans for using Volunteers, and facilities available for housing and feeding the students.

Last year, the initial North Carolina Volunteers program involved 100 students, working in six community action projects. The students started adult-literacy programs, gave pre-school training to disadvantaged children, drove bookmobiles into isolated mountain areas, worked with mentally retarded children, and built and repaired houses, to name just a few of the jobs they tackled.

The recruiting program for 1965 starts immediately, and ends March 31. Students may pick up applications at campus student union centers, or from North Carolina Volunteers school representatives whose names will be posted on campus bulletin boards.

The 1965 Volunteers effort will be administered by the North Carolina Fund, with Jack P. Mansfield acting as North Carolina Volunteers director and Frank Rush and Bill Harriss acting as field supervisors. Campus contact work will involve many of last summer's Volunteers.

Every college campus in the state will be visited by a special Volunteers recruiting team from the North Carolina Fund headquarters in Durham. Recruiters will show a special documentary film on the 1964 Volunteers' work, pass out information on the 1965 program, and answer questions from interested students.

The 1965 program will last 11 weeks. Volunteers will receive room and board, plus a $250 honorarium at the end of the service period.

Throughout the 11-week period, each team of Volunteers will work under the direction of adult advisors, and local public service agencies.

The recruiting - selection - training timetable, some of it still in the planning states, looks like this:

Recruiting runs through March, all applications must be in by March 31. During the first two weeks of April, applications will be screened by three boards — a campus review board, a regional board, and a state-wide committee. The 250 successful applicants will be notified by April 15.

The 250 Volunteers will report in mid-June for a four-day training period, probably on a college campus centrally located within the state. Then the Volunteers will move into the 15 communities for their summer of work.

Campaign

During last Monday night's meeting of the Exec Board, a motion was passed giving political candidates greater freedom of expression.

The motion, made by Corky Ecklin, provided that the board permit any form of campaigning, posters, or literature that is not harmful to college property. The motion contained a provision where by candidates would be responsible for removing posters and other materials within 48 hours after the election.

The motion passed by a slim margin.
