Would You Believe?—It certainly looks as though the Freshmen girls this year are going to cause a lot of excitement especially with hunting season so near at hand. Of course this is too good to be true, but this is ACC's version of project "HEADSTART". Actually these imitation bunnies were a part of the annual Mr. Top Hat Dance sponsored by Tri-Sigma Sorority. Pole Mystery

By DAVID JARMEN

Over the past few years, many strange incidents have taken place on the A. C. campus which no one, not even the Administration, has been able to explain. One of these incidents faced the Administration Friday morning.

As the Administration slowly made their way to work, they were approached with the problem of how to get into their building. They found that the doors were blocked by several large telephone poles. Apparently, these poles were taken from the student parking lot where they have been blocking traffic for a month by a group of adventurous students. Attached to these poles were various signs, which will not be repeated here, but which certainly made the student's point clear.

The question that the Administration is asking now may be: Is this an example of the student projects which will take place in the coming year? Only time will tell whether or not this question will materialize.

Coach Norfolk Speaks At Exec Board Meeting

Coach Ira Norfolk, Athletic Director and Head Basketball Coach was guest speaker at the Executive Board meeting Monday night. Coach Norfolk spoke on school spirit and the coming basketball season.

Norfolk began by pointing out that ACC's basketball players are more than just ball players. He said that many of the boys are very fine students, with some having been on the "Dean's List." "There were also two ACC basketball players who were on the Carolina Conference's All Academic Team last year. Out of the five boys picked, ACC had two," said Norfolk.

Norfolk also spoke concerning the new Athletic Booklet that the school has printed this year. This booklet contains the objectives of the schools athletic programs. He hopes that this booklet will provide a guideline for other schools for setting up athletic programs.

Norfolk also noted many changes that had taken place in the athletic program this year. The baseball team has new uniforms. An organ has been donated by the Athletic Committee to the college and it will be used to provide music during half-time at the basketball games. This year there will also be a Freshman basketball team. It has also been arranged, announced Norfolk, for the top intramural teams to play preliminary games during two of the home stands. As of now, said Norfolk, there is only one home game without a preliminary game. On that night the Marine Corps Band will give a concert before the varsity game.

This year ACC is having a Basketball Tournament during the Christmas Holidays. One of the teams that will be played is Georgia Southern, which was one of the top teams in the nation last year. Norfolk said the Wilson Junior Chamber of Commerce is handling the ticket sales for the tournament.

Norfolk also mentioned some facts concerning the Booster Club. He said if it was not for the support which this group gives the athletic program at ACC we would not be able to have a program. Two years ago the Booster Club had only 36 members, but last year there were 129 members and the club contributed $5,000 to ACC's athletic program.

In speaking about support of the athletic teams at ACC, Norfolk said that nothing means as much as the student body being a part of the athletic program. He said that ballgames have the potential of being a real rallying point on campus. He urged and all students try to attend the games, especially now that the new gym has been built and is no trouble to reach.

Norfolk said one of the goals of the athletic program here at ACC this year is to win the Conference's sportsmanship award. He said that this will be very difficult since we don't have a football team, but he feels we can win it if the student body makes a special effort to be good sportsmen. Norfolk said he feels our athletic teams are going to be strong this year and he hopes the students will support them.
