Tell It Like It Is!

The question this week is: "Should speakers in religious serons wices express political beliefs?" west sindents and faculty members t son across campus were asked for ate i their opinion on the subject. some of the better answers

"Since the purpose of religion istate is to confront man with reality, the diagnost and politics are as such reality, weial gospel' is necessary. The I meaching of 'social ospel' by I preacher should be to enone lighten and lead his people to active participation in the politiral arena." DMD (student)

. Keep topics to restr ligion . . . What do you want?

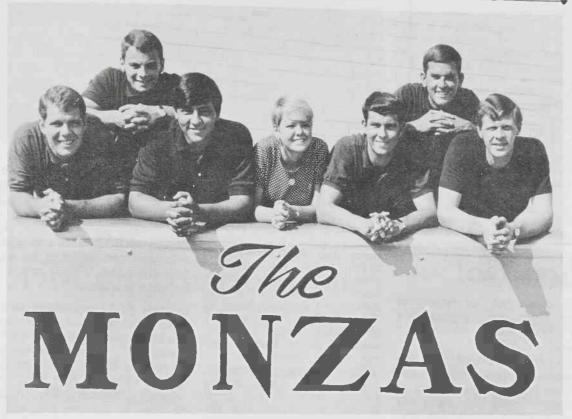

"Yes. religion should cover all aspects of life. Politics withle 10 out religion is tyranny; religion the 1 without politics is chaos." is WE BEC (student)

"It is presently explicit that A.C.C. is a Christian school. If political views are allowed to enter the required convocation, A. C. may in turn become a Party' school as well as a Christian one." JRS (student)

"To say that they absolutely annot speak about politics would limit their freedom of speech." L.J. (student)

"The acceptability of the political views depends upon its

John Bircher Speaks

Lt. Col. Outlaw Advocates U.S. SpeedUpBombingInVietnam

By RHETT B. WHITE

The North Carolina Coordinator of the John Birch Society, retired Lt. Col. Wilbur Outlaw, said here last week that the United States should bomb Russian ships found in the barbors of North Vietnam. "I suggest we bomb enemy ships," he said, and "Russia is the enemy."

The retired Air Force officer was on campus to appeal for signers of a petition to ask Congress to prohibit trade with the nations of Eastern Europe that are considered a part of the Communist bloc. Our enemy is the "total bloc of Communist nations," he said in denying that the Vietnam war is one isolated conflict.

"Russian aid has been made possible by our help to Russian satellites," he stated in a bold declaration that the Soviet Union does no thave the industrial capacity to aid North Vietnam without the benefit of American foreign aid and trade concessions to the countries of Eastern Eu-Stop War

When quizzed on ways to stop the war the John Birch coordinator said that a negotiated settlement "is not a win." He had earlier maintained that "we (the John Birch Society) are not war mongers.'

Too Many Frescas?

Players Span Panorama Of Sandburg's Writings

day evening, paid a tribute so great to the late Carl Sandburg that even the old poet-historianbiographer himself, if he had lived to enjoy it, would have come away boasting of the diversity of his literary career. The people living in a day-today world, with all of its divergencies-sadness, happiness, worry, laughter — was the model for Sandburg's works; and the

In a life-spanning panorama of Sandburg's poetical and lyrical "bags", the players took the audience on a mystical journey through childhood, adolescence, maturity, war, love and death. Each category was filled with all the wit and emotion that Sandburg always managed to capture in his writings.

Using only two tables, three stools, one chair and a stack of books, the performers focused the entire attention of the audience on themselves, their actions and the words of Sandburg. Especially notable for their interpretation of Sandburg's poetry was "Fog." Not only was the lighting extremely affective, but the pausing in the lines, the movement of Miss Maureen Mc-Kovich's hands and the fluctuations in her voice brought meaning and motion to the poem. One could almost see and feel the fog as it moved over the city, as it engulfed the metropolis' landmarks and then moved on out to sea.

It would be impossible to pass judgment on the three players as to which gave the best per-
