NUMBER TEN

Many hours have been spent calling our alumni but it has been well worth it. For those who have worked on the campaign it has been thrilling although there were times when you felt like giving up. All this despair or giving up you might have felt is quickly forgotten as someone holds up a card and yells "I've got a hundred." (Photo by Ed Harris)

Telephone

Students of Atlantic Christian are participating in the Alumni Telephone Campaign being held in Hardy Alumni Hall. The campaign was set for two weeks and is now progressing into the last few days. As of Monday night $11,212 was pledged. The goal for the campaign is $25,000.

The proceeds of the campaign will go towards the completion of the brick walk extending from the Art Building to the Student Center plus the landscaping of the new women's Residence Hall.

Motivating the Greek organizations on campus to work on the campaign is a $25.00 prize for getting the most pledges. There will be a prize for both fraternity and sorority. As of Monday night Phi Mu Sorority was leading with $3045. Delta Zeta Sorority was not far behind with $2,745. In the fraternity division Alpha Sigma Phi is ahead with $2124. The average nightly pledges are ranging about $2200.

Information On Sex

The booklet Elephant and Butterflies and Contraceptives has been well received at UNC at Chapel Hill. It is now in its second printing. This booklet contains some vital and well presented information as recognized by some of our faculty and administration.

Jack Stelljes, Dean of Men, "The booklet is dedicated to the prevention of the tragedy of unwanted pregnancies and venereal disease. Its purpose is not to advocate premarital sex, but rather to be a source of information available to people in hopes of educating them.

Mrs. Mildred Latham, Student Bookstore Manager, "The book Elephants and Butterflies and Contraceptives presents knowledge that should be available to those who need it. The book is written by a group of medical students who are aware of the problem from several points of view.

The information is good. The reality of the problems exist. The need to prevent the problems is imperative. Dr. Crist says on page 20, "It was written by students not to promote promiscuity, but rather, in recognition of the fact that many young people are in fact risking pregnancy, and in hopes of increasing their individual and social responsibility." In light of the latter statement the book is excellent."

Dr. Allan R. Sharp, director of Ministerial Education and Instructor of Marriage in the Family, Elephants and Butterflies and Contraceptives is an attractively prepared brochure on birth control intended to give accurate information to those seeking such information. Prepared by a faculty member of the UNC School of Medicine, in cooperation with informed and creative students, this brochure should be made available to all who desire it. Separating fact from fiction may be the first and very best step to valid sex education and this booklet appears to make just such a contribution to our society.

These people and many others have recognized the need for

Coffee House Open

A coffee house is a happening. This Thursday evening, 6:30-10:30 p.m., a coffee house will be open in the basement of the Old Gym. Sponsored by the Campus Christian Association, in conjunction with the Student Center, the coffee house will provide an informal, come-and-go atmosphere in which to gather for conversation, discussion, entertainment and relation. This evening's coffee house is the first of a regular schedule of coffee houses to be open on the ACC campus.

Highlights of this evening will be entertainment provided by various students on campus, including Cynde Mercer, Mike Raper, Beth Whitley, and others.

All students are invited to give suggestions and ideas for the coffee house. Susan Jaquith, C.C.A. president, states that "We need everybody's interest and participation for its success." The coffee house is being established "by students and for students of ACC. Attempts to establish the coffee house last year were unsuccessful. The major problem proved to be a lack of adequate housing. However, money appropriated for renovation of the Old Gym opened the basement for student recreation.

The physical education department will remove newly installed ping pong tables each time the coffee house is set up. Last spring the C.C.A. invested in a sound system which includes mikes and amplifiers, and will be used by the entertainers and for background music. Candle-lit tables, black lights and posters will add further to the atmosphere.

Any groups interested in sponsoring the coffee house or contributing to the entertainment or atmosphere are urged to contact Susan Jaquith at the New Women's Residence Hall.

Tell It Like It Is!
We wondered in how many different directions our student body would go, if we posed the question, "If you had a five day vacation, where would you go and what would you do?" These are the replies.

K.C.D., senior: Go to the mountains and rest for five days.

J.H.A., junior: I'd go to Hawaii and live it up.

P.S.S., senior: I'd go to Japan and drink at Kirin Beer Hall.

N.K.H., senior: I'd to the farm bureau and get a new rain hat.

M.A.D., freshmen: I'd pick Florida and go swimming and soak up the rays.

D.T.P., sophomore: I'd go to Dr. Hemby's house and learn how to pass English.

J.C.H., sophomore: Australia and chase kangaroos.

B.B.F., I'd go to Hawaii and study the methods of volcano eruptions and tribal fertility rights.

D.M.C., Go to Mt. Olive and talk to Jimmy Wayne Overton and Harvey J. Barwick.

JEE. P., junior: I'd go Puerto Rico and visit my sister and

Stafford

By JIM ABBOTT

William Stafford has been acclaimed as being one of the top American poets writing today. Last Thursday he came to AC to share some of his poetry with us. Students, faculty and local citizenry gathered to bask in the enjoyment that comes from hearing a top poet read from some of his own works.

At the opening of his remarks Stafford proposed the idea that, "writing is very much like talking, it's just the language we use everyday to get along with." "Creative writing," he said, "is a process that will make things happen that wouldn't have happened if you hadn't entered the process." Unlike some other contemporary poets, Stafford wants people to like his works. He admits that, "if someone likes something I write, then I like it more than I used to and if someone doesn't like one of my works then I like it less."

Stafford at one point in his discussion, quoted from the Viennese philosopher Wittgenstein who said, "to do philosophy one doesn't learn how to do it, but that you can do it." Stafford

Eisenstadt

Wednesday, December 2, Miss Eisenstadt will lead an open discussion at 7:30 p.m. in Hardy Alumni Hall, as the guests of the Campus Christian Association. Miss Eisenstadt will speak Thursday, December 3rd, at 11:00 a.m. in Howard Chapel. She will be on campus all day Thursday, December 3rd to talk with students interested in various phases on drug abuse. The convocation program and CCA open discussion are open to all students, administration, and faculty interested in one of the major crises of our time-drugs. (See related article).

applies this concept to his notion of creative writing. He says, "you don't learn how to write creatively, you learn that you can write creatively."

"A poem," said Stafford, "is anything that is said in a certain kind of way and invites a certain kind of reaction to it," and in his latest book Allegiances, Stafford says of his poetry, that he tries to make each poem "be its own self."

In closing his remarks, Stafford admonished men to turn to the poet for new answers to contemporary problems and he expressed the hope that eventually, "there will come a time when all we've said and all we've hoped will be alright."

Clean-Up Campaign Set For Saturday

The Atlantic Christian Science club as an affiliate of the Collegiate Academy of the North Carolina Academy of Sciences (CANCAS), is conducting a clean-up campaign, Saturday, November 21 beginning at 10 a.m.

The campaign will begin with the gathering of participants at the science building, going in front of Waters, up Gold Park Street toward Ward Boulevard and ending up at Toisnot for a cookout. One city truck will be used for the collection of debris. Participation of other clubs will be greatly appreciated.

CANCAS

The Collegiate Academy is a junior member of the North Carolina Academy of Science. It has one vote in the senior academy through the voice of its state president. Each year CASCAS sponsors scientific field trips in the spring for all member science clubs in the state. This organization also provides awards for a research program. Any member of any local club can present a paper on his research in biology or chemistry during a symposium at Wake Forest.

Club

The Atlantic Christian College Science Club under the current leadership of Miss Susan Nelson is conducting this clean-up campaign to give recognition to CASCAS. This local affiliate consists of biology, chemistry, math and medical technology majors as well as department teachers and anyone interested in the organization. For the past several years the ACC club has been earning money by raising and selling tomato and pepper seedlings. The club recently purchased a ginkgo tree to aid in botany studies as well as add to the beauty of the campus.

GETTING INTO THE SWING OF IT — Pretty Jackie Worsley of Oak City, recently named Atlantic Christian's Homecoming queen, has been chosen to serve as "Miss Merry Christmas," in Wilson's annual Christmas Parade which will be held on Sunday, Nov. 29.
