Delta Sigma Phi fraternity and Delta Zeta Sorority walked out of Wilson Gym Thursday night with the two trophies for the two best performances of the annual Greek sing. Each group had 13 minutes to perform. They were judged on a scale of 1 to 5 on stage appearance, vocal ability, performing ability, expression, costumes and how they related the theme, word enunciation, and originality. Serving as Master of Ceremonies, Dr. Allan Sharp introduced each group with a brief historical introduction.

Alpha Sigma Phi, dressed in white shirts and shorts, entertained us with a melody of songs from the well-known musical "The Sound of Music". Following was the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity. Dressed in various costumes, they were natives stranded on a South Pacific island during World War II. Having everything they needed for survival with the exception of a female, their need was later met when Bob Vartanian, dressed as a native girl in a purple grass skirt, strutted in front of the crew. The Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity serenaded us with familiar songs of the war era. Among the songs were Yankee Doodle, Dixie, and other patriotic songs. Ending the fraternity section were the Sigma Pi's. Dressed as beach bums, they sang many familiar beach hits including "Girl Watcher", "California Girl" and "Surfer Girl."

After a brief intermission the three sororities competed. Dressed in long white suits, the Sigma Sigma Sorority displayed Southern Belles. Their melody of songs included "Alabama" and other familiar songs of the south. The Delta Zetas wore western outfits with six can-can girls dancing as they sang their songs of "How the West Was Won." Concluding the annual Greek Sing was the Phi Mu sorority dressed in white sailor outfits. Their theme was "Set sail with Phi Mu."

Byrd, President of the Interfraternity council presented the awards. Dr. Sharp was presented with a gift of appreciation for his service as Master of Ceremonies. Terry Howard of Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity accepted a gift in honor of his girlfriend, June Rouse who has been hospitalized since January. Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity received the trophy for the highest grade point average. Phi Mu sorority received a trophy for the highest grade point average among the pledges. Sigma Sigma Sigma received it for the highest overall grade point average. The annual Greek sing ended as the Delta Zeta Sorority and the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity captured the trophies for the best performances for the 1978 Greek Sing.

Council Meeting Stresses Unity

The second meeting of the Council of Presidents was held this past Monday with 25 persons present representing 26 of the 40 campus organizations. The discussion, following a banquet in Hardy Alumni Hall, centered around the extent to which each organization has contributed and can continue to contribute to the total campus community. Each organizational representative was asked by President Doster, who presided over the session, to describe how their organization contributed.

After an hour long session, the consensus seemed to be that each organization was attempting to strengthen itself while striving for a better student awareness of its purposes and priorities. When asked by Doster to give advice concerning what the priorities of the president should be in these matters in the coming year, the response was almost unanimous — greater student unity. Suggestions were made for leadership conferences, organizational fairs, and various other activities, especially those in which Freshmen might be more effectively to the various organizations. The desire for a more congenial relationship among Greek and non-Greek students received special attention from the leaders present at the conference. Suggestions for effecting a better understanding were offered and discussed. In line up this, it was urged that leaders try to coordinate their activities more effectively and to realize that the student's main responsibility is to scholastics. Leaders should remember to evaluate past procedures and thereby plan present activities more effectively. Doster closed the meeting by thanking all those in attendance. The following organizations were represented:

- Alpha Chi
- Freshman Class
- Panhellenic Council
- MIA
- Student Nursing Organization

DALE ADAMS

So, you want to know which fraternity and which sorority is best on this campus. Well, we don't know. But, we do know who won which events during Greek Week, the week when the fraternities and sororities compete among themselves to build up their common goal of brotherhood (excuse the sexist language.)

The first three days of Greek Week were rather uneventful. Monday was Jersey Day, Tuesday was Dress-Up Day, and Wednesday was Jersey Day again. (I think that next year it might be a good idea to have the Jersey Days spread further apart so that the people wearing them might wash them.)

The climax of the first half of the week was the poorly attended basketball game played by the Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Society. Thanks to some miraculous foul shooting by the women during the final two minutes of the game, the score was deadlocked at the end of regulation time. The men seemed to be hampered only a little by having their legs tied together and thoroughly outclassed the women by using "teamwork" to allow players to "slam-dunk" the ball. Because the Gym was being locked the teams were not allowed to play an overtime period, so the game remained in a tie.

Runoff Results

Following the runoff of April 12 and 13, the Junior Class had a full slate of officers; however, the Senior and Sophomore Classes have offices to be filled. Kathy Whitehurst was elected Senator-at-large of the Junior Class. Beth Perkins was elected Vice-President of the Senior Class, but there will be a runoff for two Senators-at-large among the following: Ron Anderson, David Betts, Suzie Cooper, Janet O'Henry Daniels, Linda George, Gary Hall, and Lou Smith. The Sophomore Class chose John Clyburn, Gregory Dozier, and Dee Waters to represent it on the Student Senate. Secretary-Treasurer of the Sophomore Class remains an open office.

Those who were in the audience during Greek Sing will attest that the judges must have had a hard time picking which sorority had the best performance. All three sororities made an excellent contribution to the program, but the Delta Zetas got the top honors by showing the audience "How the West Was Won." It seems to this most prejudiced writer that the judges had a somewhat easier time in picking out the best performance by a fraternity. Delta Sigma Phi won the fraternity division of Greek Sing with their performance of "Songs From South Pacific." All of the sororities were well polished and most of the fraternities had evidently spent many hours in practice.

Saturday, Toisnot Park must have resembled Pandemonium. There were people climbing on top of each other's backs. People had their extremities tied together. Brother was throwing egg at brother and men were being glutinous with saltine crackers. This scene, which could resemble Dante's Inferno if we had a little imagination, is known as Greek Activities Day. Here, fraternities and sororities compete in such activities as building pyramids out of human bodies, an event won by the Delta Sigs and the Delta Zetas. Other events included a three legged race, won by the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity and the Delta Zeta sorority; an egg toss, won by Delta Sigma Phi and the Tri-Sigs; a wheel barrow race won by the DZs; a cracker eating contest, won by Sigma Phi Epsilon; a suitcase relay, won by Phi Mu; and a tug-of-war, won by the Activities Day champions, Delta Sigma Phi and Delta Zeta. This was the second consecutive year that the fraternity division has been won by Delta Sigma Phi and the eighth year, overall, that the sorority division has been won by the Delta Zeta's.

Many people think that these two activities are all that take place during Greek Week, but they aren't. Awards are also
