grease ladeled off." Taylor is also trying several new ideas in serving the food. "We are constantly trying to improve the salad bar." Also, in compliance with many requests, hot Oatmeal is being served for Breakfast. "We even want to try to have a buffet lunch once a month," Taylor stated. There was even a little talk of more types of foods being served for those who are on diets.

At the end of the meeting, Taylor stated that the Cafeteria workers were the "best food-producing people . . . that I've seen anywhere."

As far as the student response has been since the beginning of this semester goes, it varies. When asked, "Have you noticed any difference in the food being served this semester and the food that was served last semester?" The following are some of the responses:

Phil: "No. It's decent, but it could be better. They need to have more variety."

Bert: "Yes, they have more deserts."

Tracy: "Not really, but I do know this, ever since I got here, I have gotten a 'whaletail' because of too many carbohydrates."

Kim: "There has been a noticable difference. The food has picked up a little bit."

These are just a few of the responses received; however, they are typical of all the responses.

Dean Gordon Joyner, Dean of Students, said that Cafeteria improvements is a two-way street. "The students are going to have to take some of the initiative to help. Like not throwing food over that sky light." Joyner also stated that the students would have to make sure that they helped in any way they could, such as making sure they put up their trays and the like.

Catherine Edwards, Chairperson for the newly formed committee, said that another way students could help is to tell any member of the Food Committee about any improvements that might be made concerning the Cafeteria.

while Honorable Mention winners will be displayed February 16-18.

The event is conducted by Scholastic Magazines, Inc., New York, and sponsored by WITN-TV, channel 7, Washington, N.C., in cooperation with Atlantic Christian College. Coordinator for the exhibition is Norbert W. Irvine of the A.C. Department of Art.

Commenting on the event, Irvine said, "The judges' reaction was that they were impressed with the quality of work coming from Eastern North Carolina. They were pleased at the variety of media submitted and the imagination shown by a large number of students participating in the show."

Some 650 pieces of work were entered for consideration. Students whose entries were selected for the exhibition will be awarded Certificates of Merit. The works of 50 students judged to be the best in various classifications will be awarded Gold Achievement Keys.

The top-drawer entries selected from the key-winning entries will be forwarded to New York to the national headquarters of Scholastic Magazines, Inc., where they will compete with finalists from across the nation for national awards.

Work selected for the exhibition was chosen Saturday by a panel of six judges: Joe Cox of the N.C. State University School of Design; Dr. Joan Gregory, chairman of the UNC-G Art Department; Jerry Johnson, professional artist of Gaithersburg, Md.; Barbara Kessler of Central Piedmon Community College Art Department; Rock Kershaw, publicity director of the Lost Colony, Manteo; and Dr. Truman Teed, Chairman of the Art Education Department of the University of South Carolina.
