 Congratulations Harper!!
 In the afternoon's "Battle of the Sexes" with MIA, the WIA "pulled through" in the tug-of-war. Way to go women! (Of course, we will not mention the fact that there were ten girls to the five guys!)
 The day would have been incomplete without an evening affair! The WIA, along with

MIA and the Student Center, sponsored a dance open to all students. Everyone present enjoyed "gettin' down to the music" which ranged from beach to disco to a "little bit of soul." WIA would like to take this opportunity to thank Phil Lassiter and the MIA Council for all of their "pro" work as D.J.'s. And "thank you" certainly is extended to you, the students who are the only ones who can "make it happen" at A.C.

Well, women, be on the lookout for the dates of upcoming events such as the Fashion Show presented in October by Belk's! And there is more to come! See ya around,

Inherit The Wind opens next Wednesday

Stage and Script's first production of the school year is Inherit the Wind, which will open Wednesday night, Oct. 10 at 8 pm in Howard Chapel. The play involves the largest assembled cast by Stage and Script. Previously dramatic productions have opened on Thursday nights. Asked about the change in opening, Drama Director Paul Crouch said, "Students have complained that they didn't have enough opportunities to see the plays. We decided to open on Wednesday to give them one more performance. Since the additional performance costs us more to do, we will have to revert to the Thursday opening if we do not get large Wednesday night audiences." The play will run through Saturday, giving students, faculty, staff and others four performance chances.

Questioned about the large cast involved, Crouch said, "Putting thirty-six people on our small stage has been a real challenge, but it has been worth it. This play gives inexperienced actors the chance to play small parts and find out what performing is all about. Hopefully, many of these people will want to come back and play larger roles in the future."

Crouch also talked about the ideas dramatized in the play. The plot depicts the famous Scopes Monkey Trial which raised the question of whether evolution could be taught in the public schools. "But," says Crouch, "the play is not about evolution. It's about whether people have the right to explore any idea that someone might raise. One character in the play says, 'An idea is like a child inside your body, it has to be born.' That's what we are concerned with in this play."

AC faculty, staff, and students with ID's are admitted free. Other students are charged fifty cents; adults one-fifty at the door.

Campus Clubs Cut

For the past several weeks, both the Student Government Association and the ACC Office of Student Services have issued a reminder in both the Green Slate and the Collegiate stating:

You are reminded of the requirement of the SGA Constitution in Article V, Section IX which states: "In order to maintain status as an official campus organization, all organizations must submit an application to the second meeting of the new Senate requesting a Charter renewal. If approved by a majority of the members of the Senate, the organization shall maintain its charter." Social forms will no longer be approved for organizations that do not have this information on file in the Office

As a result of this request, the following organizations have been approved by the SGA Senate as official campus organizations. Accounting Club
