

Cassandra Feaster Wins 500.00 Jayvee Scholarship

Cassandra Feaster, who prefers to be called Patricia, was chosen by the administration to be the recipient of the Junior Chamber of Commerce's scholarship of $500.00.

Each year the Junior Chamber of Commerce selects one school in the Greensboro area to receive this scholarship. It is then up to the school to decide to whom this scholarship should go. The main qualifications, by which this choice is made, are that the student must be an all-around student, and active in various extra-curricular activities.

Patricia certainly fits this bill. She is president of Cone Hall, on the Marshall Board, Miss Bennett College U.N.C.F., and is active in many other activities. Her hobbies are dancing and playing the piano, and she possesses that precious talent for winning and keeping friends.

Conference Is

Attended By Choir

Dr. Isaac Miller, Mrs. Crawford and six Bennett Choir Belles went to Dallas, Texas the last of April to represent Bennett at the Methodist Convention, which resulted into the merger of the United Methodist Church.

The six choir members, who served as our representatives, contributed their voices, along with other college representatives to make up the All-State choir. There were approximately 120 voices that rang out and echoed through the Dallas Auditorium, during the convention's pageant. Representing Bennett were: Jayne Cromwell, Jemmie Peevy, Kathleen Evans, Janet Harrell, Audrey Blaylock, and Carolyn McCaray.

13 Colleges Plan Cultural Trips

The Thirteen College-Curriculum program struck home again.

Miss Vera Fowler will hold top elective position in next year's student government. Vera won position of President of Student Senate for 1968-69.

With its "student-focused" philosophy, plans have already been made to provide more recreation for the 50 Bennett Belles in the program.

On the 13th of this month, they are going to see the movie "Dr. Zhivago", which is playing at the Carolina Theater. Then the following day, the 14th, they are going on a tri-city tour of various colleges and universities in Raleigh, Chapel Hill and Durham. Next, on the coming Saturday, the 18th, they have tentative plans to go on a picnic. Among the places they may go to are, "Chimney Rock", "Grandfather's Mountain", and "The Great Smokey's National Park."

Freshman Choir Proves A Hit

On Saturday evening, May 11, the Bennett College Freshmen Choir, directed by Edward Lowe and accompanied by Miss Charlotte L. Alston, presented an excellent concert of songs. The program was divided into four parts and included love songs, American folksongs, songs of the season, and anthems.

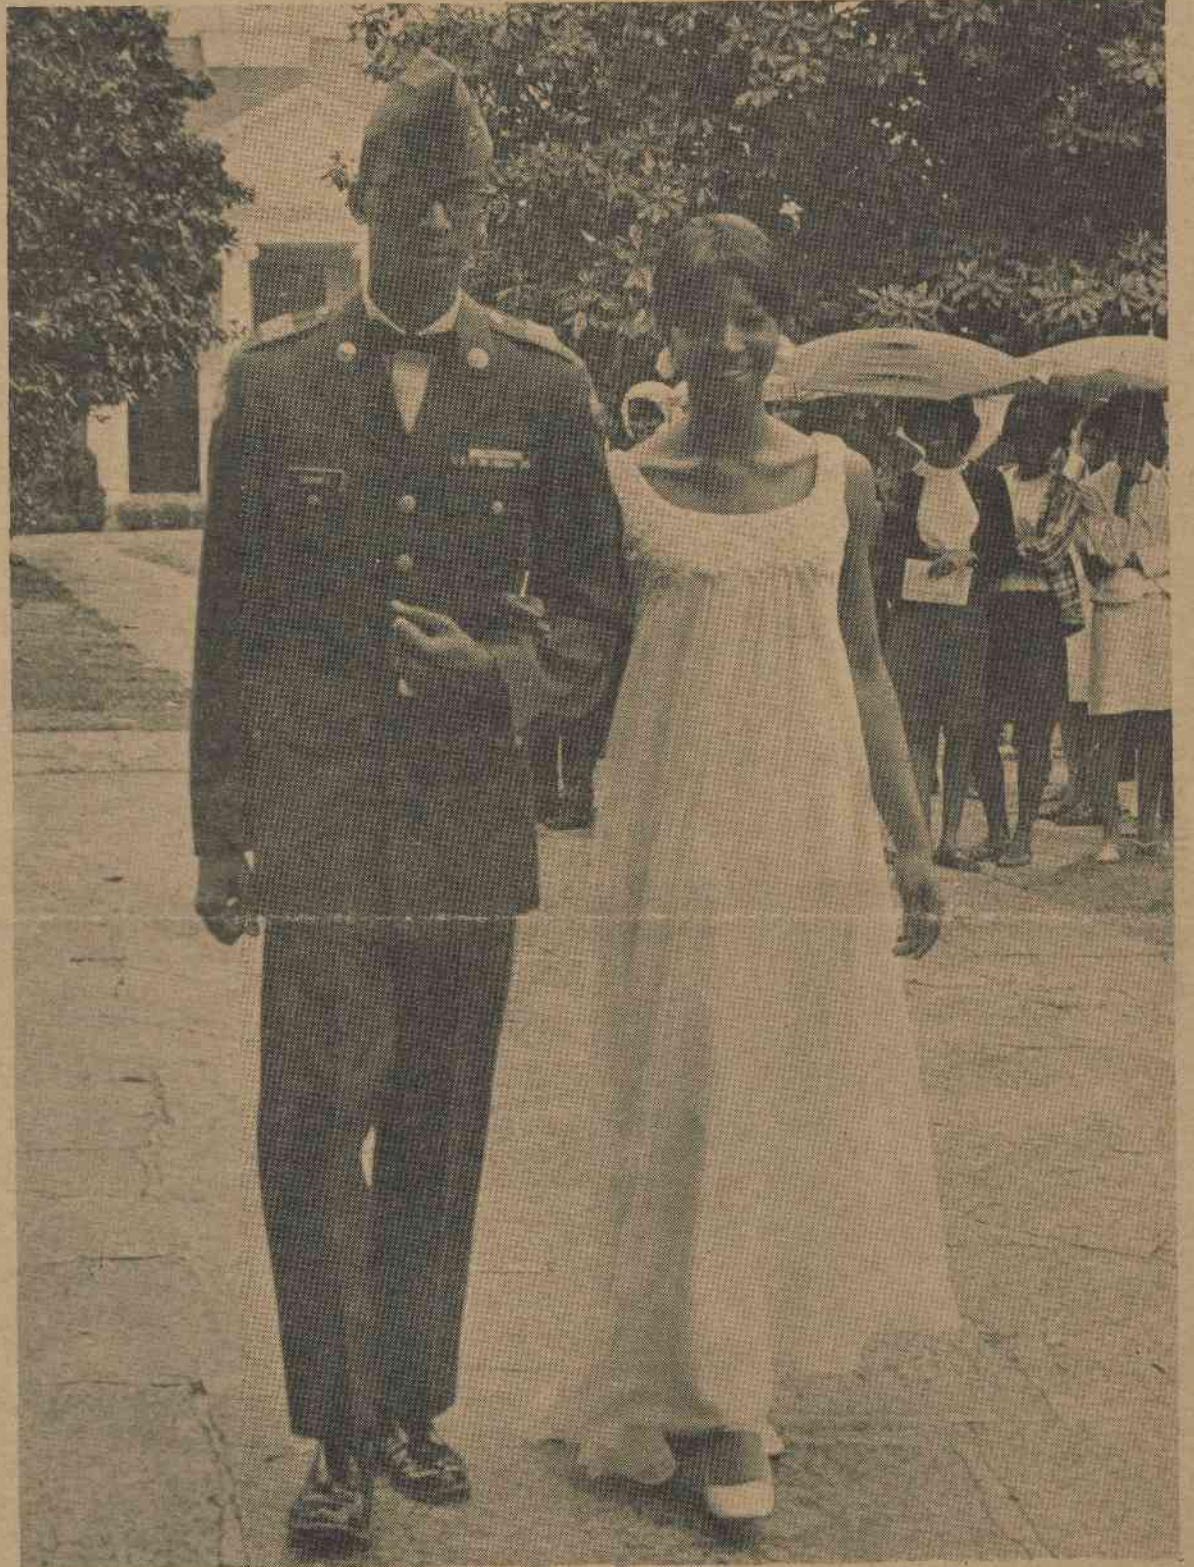

The "Hallelujah Chorus" from The Messiah by Handel, arranged by Treharne; the familiar "Onward, Ye Peoples" by Sibelius, arranged by Lefebvre; "Great Day" arranged by Ehret; "April Is In My Mistress' Face" by Morley, arranged by K. Davis; and fifteen others were among the songs that delighted the audience from the beginning to the end.

Field Study Is Possibility

In the near future there might be a great opportunity for the advancement of Bennett students. This advancement will be the result of the proposed field study program which will enable students to gain experience in their future occupations. Those interested in psychology might be able to work as aide in the psychiatric ward of a hospital. Journalism majors might spend part of their senior year as cub reporters or copywriters on a local newspaper.

Sheila Savoir, a junior psychology major, is one of the patrons of this idea. She feels that this field study program will especially aide those students who will be unable to gain the necessary experience by going to graduate school. The experience gained from this field study program should more than double the chances of a better job and more pay. Sometime soon with the cooperation of the administration and the student body, not only education majors but students majoring in any subject will be able to gain experience in their chosen field of work.

Will Someone Please Tell, Who Turned Out The Lights?

By DIMPLES ARMSTRONG

Surely everyone has heard the joke, "Where was Moses when the lights went out?" Well, that's where the Bennett Belles were Saturday evening around 8:00 p.m. Everyone, like Moses, was "IN THE DARK."

As the girls used the stairs, it reminded them of ghost hunting in an old haunted house. As might have been expected, all male visitations were supposed to have been terminated before the shadows of night fell. Inside the dorm rooms, the only source of light was a "one-per-room" candle that flickered in the draft from around the windows. While the lights were out, there were quite a number of hideous deeds and mischievous acts performed. Normality was almost resumed after the lights came back on around 11:30 p.m.

Monday about 3:00 p.m. the same thing happened. The lights stayed off only about two hours this time. But Tuesday, about 5:15 p.m., the Belles were again put and kept in the dark until approximately 11:00 p.m.

Now, Wednesday was a different story. Up until now, the lights only have gone out when we needed them most--at night. But Wednesday, it seemed as if the lights were going to make a whole day of it--then they went out about 11:00 a.m.! But, lucky enough, they were back on before dark.

The funniest part about it all is that the lights in Cone saved themselves the trouble of coming on and going off repeatedly. They just went off Saturday and didn't bother to come back on. Maybe they're just waiting for a better day!??

The worst thing about the whole business is that the lights picked a time when students have the most work to catch up on.
