Greene, head Henry Wiseman Kendall Center Guilford County.

This seminar was a formal recognition of the new co-op program at Bennett College.

EDUCATION SERIES HELD

The Modern Educational Series sponsored by the Department of Education was held May 3, 4, and 5, in the Black Hall Assembly.

De. Lela R. Hankins, Director of teacher education presided. The program included discussions by educators from several colleges and presentations by students of Bennett College.

★ FINALS! ★

Once again its time for us to brush the cob webs off those tightly closed books and begin preparing for final exams.

During the last week of classes, attendance is perfect and teachers begin reviewing or teaching what the final exams will cover.

"Mrs. Jones, what may we expect on the final?"

"Well, you must be able to relate previous work in accordance with the subject matter which we are now covering."

"But we'd like to know the pages."

"Just be knowledgeable on all the facts."

The students are expected from this conversation to know what to study. So with a jumbled mind we proceed to prepare. Preparation amounts to finding the location of the library and the location of our text books.

For once in our lives we begin to burn the midnight oil, drink hot coffee, and stay in the dorm at night. Sacrifices must be made and sacrifice we do. Our love life dwindles; we realize that we should have gone to class; and then we come to the conclusion that we have no business here in the first place.

If you have seven exams, don't worry! You've got three glorious days in which to study and pray that the dorm burns down or the electricity goes berserk.

When all else fails you can count on your exams being widely spaced apart. This amounts to five the first day and two on the last day of exams. The whole school system seems to be against you. Your last resort is to make it home before your computerized report card does.

Co-operative Education

The Co-Op Program offers numerous advantages over the more conventional types of formal education and includes many intangible benefits which greatly enhance the student's complete program of higher education.

--GAINING deeper understanding of the relationship between classroom theory and practical application through on-the-job exposure to professionals in the field.

--DISCOVERING correct career choice and receiving proper career guidance.

--ACQUIRING professional level of competence, skill, and knowledge, in the student's particular course of study.

--ELEVATING academic achievement because of increased motivation through practical application.

--EXPANDING area of selectivity for permanent employment through contacts and references gained while involved in co-op experiences.

--DEVELOPING interpersonal skills of human relations.

--ACHIEVING personal maturity necessary for upper-level employment opportunities.

--ACCUMULATING element of experience requisite to obtaining permanent employment above entry-level standards.

--EARNING funds to substantially aid in defraying college expenses.
