

Two new faces added to Social Sciences

By Brooke Walker
Banner Reporter

Two new faces have been added to the faculty this semester: Dr. Elizabeth Denny and Dr. Marylin Karmel.

Dr. Denny, who specializes in clinical psychology, of Learning and Social Science Statistics is a native of Chapel Hill, last taught at UNCG.

"I enjoy teaching", she said.

"Teaching and research go hand in hand."

Denny said what she likes most about teaching at Bennett is the focus regarding women in the aspect of science.

Denny said that she likes smaller classes at Bennett rather than the ones at UNCG where sometimes there are as many as 200 students in a class.

"It makes it possible for more class discussion about ethical and moral issues which are important for liberal education."

Dr. Karmel, a part-time instructor and a mother of three children, said that she decided she wanted more out of life.

"As a woman, I wanted more than just marriage and children," she said.

"I had a desire to find out who I was and to contribute something

Karmel is also a licensed psychotherapist at Family and Children's Services in Greensboro.

Karmel found out about Bennett last summer when she worked with Dr. Alston, vice president for Academic Affairs during a three-week campus project teaching middle school students about opera.

"Bennett has a very nice feeling," she said.

"I'm impressed with the students' consideration, politeness, and interest."
