Wu-Tang Clan has done it again

Keita N. White

Banner Reporter

If you like rap music the Wu-Tang Clan has got something for you. Raekwon the Chef, one of the founding members of the group is making sure the Wu-Tang's name stands out on the map of the hip-hop world with his recently released debut album "Only Built 4 Cuban Linx."

The Fall of 1993 the Wu-Tang Clan crept up on the scene with their first single, "Protect Ya Neck."

This single had a few heads nodding, but no one imagined that this 11-man team would explode on the hip-hop scene with enough ferocity to easily measure 2.4 on the Rictor scale.

It's now 1995 and the Wu-Tang Clan is far from finished blowing up the Billboard Charts.

Their newest solo album to bomb radio waves, "Only Built 4 Cuban Linx," comes from one of Wu-Tang's best kept secrets. You may remember Raekwon the Chef from Wu-Tang's debut album where his unique style of bouncing lyrics off of hard core tracks in the gold after being released only four and a half short weeks ago. Raekwon along with Ghost Face Killer (who is featured in 13 out of the 18 tracks) turns his heart felt hooks into an autobiographical account of Urban street life.

This concept of street reporting is constantly manifested in cuts such as "Knuckleheadz," where heart wrenching lyrics about making it out of the ghetto flow over a heavy base line with an eerie flow of pianos weaving in and out and "Glaciers of Ice" where a story about a gun heist is told over a constant barrage of gun fire and screaming, attacking you from every angle.

Not every song on the album jumps out at you; however, "Only Built 4 Cuban Linx" is definitely worth picking up at your favorite record store. The Wu-Tang Clan has done it again.

Music Review

song "C.R.E.A.M." gained him an enormous amount of respect in the hip-hop community and earned the Wu-Tang its second gold single.

"Only Built 4 Cuban Linx," the offspring of Raekwon's hip-hop "hype" and super producer the Rza's genius track production, is already shipping
