Dr. Lillian Bell a visiting professor from Notre Dame probably has more in common with the students at Bennett than the average professor.

Why?

Bell is experiencing dorm life all over again. She resides in an apartment in Player Hall.

"It has all the amenities and is quite spacious," she said. "I have the usual complaints about living in a dorm."

Bell opted to live on campus to be closer to student life and to be closer to the campus in general.

Bell is teaching the mini-course 'Media Sports and Society.'

Bell has given me a lot to think about such as the politics involved in sports," said Bianca Williams, a sophomore mass communications major from D.C.

While in Beijing, she met President Scott who asked her to come to Bennett to teach. Having never been to North Carolina, Bell saw Scott's offer as a challenge and alerted Notre Dame that she would be taking a short leave.

Bell is not only teaching a class, she is also working on a project with Scott and plans to stay at Bennett until the middle of March.

A native of Elkhart, Ind.,

Bell has been a journalist for years.

She has her own column in The Elkhart Truth; a daily newspaper in Elkhart.

"The class is fun, being a sports fan I find it particularly interesting," said Wanda Harris, a senior English major from Charlotte.

While in Greensboro, Bell wants to see the Woolworth lunch counter downtown.

"I was surprised to know that Bennett students were involved in the sit-in movement," she said. "I thought it was only the four guys from A&T. That shows what the media can do," she added.

SGA sponsors V-Day dinner, movie

The Student Government Association sponsored Care"a"Van on Valentines Day, Feb. 14, for those students who did not have the resources to celebrate that special day.

Care"a"Van was created by SGA in support of Bennett students who did not have the funds or the means to enjoy Valentine's Day off campus, said Jennifer Farris, Miss Bennett College.

Thirteen students were selected amongst all the students present at the ACES Honors Convocation which meet on Feb. 13.

Thanks to SGA's handling of expenses, the 13 selected students enjoyed dinner at Pizza Hut and viewed a movie at Litchfield Cinemas.

A 14th student was also selected. She was able to take a special someone out on a date to pizza and a movie on SGA.

"The night went as plan and I enjoyed myself. I hope that SGA does it again," said Jennifer Ajose, sophomore, biology major, who was one of the students chosen.

"I was happy about the success of the Care"a"Van and I hope that SGA will continue it in the future," said, Jasmin Canady, corresponding secretary for SGA.

less likely to be treated unfairly by the police and they had congregations to bail them out of jail, if necessary.

The women did not have to stand on the front line, though Johnson said they could create solutions.

Students were given the Faith Forum, an official publication of the Greensboro Pulpit Forum, which detailed the plan for getting the church and community involved in the discussions.

According to the Feb. 18, edition, the Pulpit Forum will conduct meetings to explain the purpose of the struggle, set forth plans to continue the struggle, and get the widest input from all parts of the community.

The Rev. Johnson invited the women to make a commitment to participate in the protests every Sunday at the Wendover Avenue Kmart and attend the meeting every Thursday at 7 p.m. at 417 Arlington St.

"Greensboro might well be an example of what the nation needs to do," Johnson said.
