COURTHOUSE

time it was built it was one of the best, if not the best, courthouse in Western North Carolina. The tower was built to house a clock, but for various reasons it was never installed. Brevard was famous as a vacation center during the summer months. Most of the attractions for the tourists had been supplied by Dame Nature, so in 1914 several local citizens purchased $135.00 worth of equipment and started showing movies in the courthouse. They agreed to pay the additional increase in the insurance rates; and that any surplus funds remaining at the end of the season would be applied on the clock for the tower. There was between $75 and $100 profit after the tourists had gone, but instead of applying this on the clock it was given to the Library which had been built on the corner of the courthouse lot—at its present location.

The courthouse stands as a monument to those of the past who gave unselfishly of their efforts
