How did the phrase, "In God We Trust" get on our coins? In the dark days of the Civil War, a country minister, who was also a farmer, wrote Secretary of the Treasury, Soloman P. Chase, asking that some suitable recognition of the Diety be placed upon our coinage. He suggested the words, "God, Liberty, Law," be used.

Secretary Chase was in sympathy with the idea, but he had a hard battle in Congress before it was adopted. Finally, on April 22, 1864, Congress authorized a two-cent piece upon which was first stamped the motto, "In God We Trust," and in 1865 it was put on all our coinage.

WHAT BOYS TALK ABOUT

When you see a group of youngsters sitting on a fence and suddenly break into an argument you often wonder what caused it. Most of the time the argument is about one topic—which youngster has the smartest dad.

In life it is only necessary to do the impossible, do without the indispensable and bear the intolerable.

The first baby of an Ecusta employee to witness the halfway mark of the twentieth century was Danny Lee McCall, Danny, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford McCall, is the 1950 winner of the U. S. Savings Bond, which is given each year to the first arrival. He is shown with his parents at their home on Highlands Road, Brevard.

Danny was born on January 5th at 4:45 A. M. at Biltmore Hospital, weighing 8 pounds and 11 ounces. His father is employed in the Inspection Department.

A man rushed into a drug store and asked the druggist what to do to stop hiccups. The answer was a slap in the face. Amazed and angry he asked the druggist why he did this.

"Well," said the druggist, "You don't have any hiccups now, do you?"

"No," shouted the customer, "But my wife out in the car still does."

No one is small who does a small job in a big way.
