

turn it to the gunner. Hunting spaniels of this type are trained to flush both furred and feathered game.

Golden Retriever—One of the more popular of the retriever breeds, the golden retrievers are hunting specialists. Their job in the field is that of finding game which has been killed or wounded by the hunter and returning that game to their masters.

The most common use of retrievers is in the hunting of waterfowl. In this type of sport the retrievers remain in the shooting blind until birds are killed, when they are ordered after the downed game. They retrieve equally well on land or water, being strong swimmers.

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

Left: "Ah-h . . . You sure do know how to soothe a guy's poor aching head, Pete!" Young Peter Best, son of F. S. Best, Main Office, gives the family pet, a Golden Retriever, a sympathetic pat on the head.

Below: Displaying championship form, this highly trained English setter strikes a pose familiar to all bird hunters. His justly-proud owner is Jack Wilber of the Refining Room.