

Bill Hensley, Protection Supervisor and Police Chief "Buck" McCall are shown at right with a "flaming" sweater which belonged to an Ecusta employee. Chief McCall and Mr. Hensley touched a match to the bottom of the sweater and in a few seconds it was enveloped in flames. Photo was taken immediately after sweater was set fire. Employees possessing these highly inflammable sweaters are urged not to wear them because of the fire hazard. They have no labels, feel like cashmere and are sold from door to door.

The youngster replied quickly, "Let me see it."

The United States has lost 90 per cent of its virgin timber to fire, insects and the lumberman's axe. Last year Boy Scouts planted several million trees to help restore depleted forests. Conservation is only one of the many services rendered by the Boy Scouts of America now celebrating their 42nd birthday.
