

↑ APPLE BUTTER TIME

PEOPLE . . .

Tom McCormick is the recognized authority on apple butter in the Inspection Department. After spending one day making enough for his own use, Clyde Crowder and Howard Lawing talked him into making some for them. Tom is shown at left clipping the apple butter from the kettle and filling the jars as Clyde places the jars in hot water. Howard has temporary duty on the stir. Tom's daughter, Hazel, sees that the job is well done. Seven bushels of apples went into this batch, which will make about eighteen gallons of apple butter. The apples are cooked in a copper kettle on this outdoor fireplace.
