

Another of the Rosman chapter's projects is the decorating of the school lunchroom for special occasions such as Halloween, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Valentine's Day, Washington's Birthday, etc. Here some of the Future Homemakers move down school's Cafeteria line where they'll be served a balanced meal ments.

Of the many worthwhile projects which are undertaken by the Rosman Future Homemakers, probably the most outstanding is that of collecting old items of clothing and remaking them into usable wearing apparel for needy children. Another of their noteworthy projects is the decorating of the school lunchroom for special occasions. A sample of this could be seen last December when they decorated the lunch room in a Christmas motif, complete with a record player and Christmas music.

The Rosman group will be host chapter for the Sub-District Rally in April. Eleven chapters in Polk, Henderson and Transylvania counties make up this sub-district—a division of the 21-county Western District. The Rosman chapter was honored last October at the District meeting held in Clyde, N. C., and attended by approximately 1,000 delegates when one of its members was elected District President. She is Miss Louetta Hooper, 16-year-old daughter of Paul Hooper, employee of Ecusta's Cellophane Division (Chemical and Casting Section). Five girls from the Rosman chapter will attend the State Convention in Raleigh this Spring—a gathering which was attended by over 4,000 delegates last year.

The aims and ideals of the Future Homemakers of America are symbolized in their emblem. The name, Future Homemakers of America, appears around the top of the octagonal plane, forming the upper part of the border of the emblem. It serves as a reminder of their future responsibilities and the many privileges that are theirs as future homemakers.

The motto, Toward New Horizons, completes the border. It expresses the purposes of the organization learning to live better today in order that their lives and those of their families may be better tomorrow.

In the center is a house, typifying not the dwelling alone, but all that the home should be. Supporting the home are two hands, symbolizing that the future homes of America are in the hands of its youth.

The lines radiating from the house exemplify the influence that flows from within the home outward into the community, and from there, to all parts of the world. The eight sides serve as reminders of the eight goals of the Future Homemakers.

That the Future Homemakers of America, whether on a local, state or national scale, plays an important role in the building of tomorrow's homes cannot be denied. The FHA, in bringing together state groups interested in and working toward better home and family living, provides untold opportunities to share in solving the problems so important to home life. It is increasing the opportunities for development of leadership and intelligent participation in home life so much needed in our life today.
