

Above: A and B Batteries' section in one of Fort Jackson's many "tent cities". Above right: At seven o'clock every morning it was "Fall In!"

Above: Jack Mackey, Charlie Disher and Homer Batson review the function of an aiming circle, the instrument used in positioning a Howitzer. Below: W. F. Taylor, commanding officer of the 316th, checks Ted Gillespie and Ted Owenby as they set off a reading on the aiming circle.

Above: "A" Battery's gun crew listens as an instructor from the 82nd Airborne Division explains the procedure used in the firing of a 105mm. Howitzer. Below: Every Reservist attending the two-weeks camp spent a full day firing the carbine for familiarization or for record.

