

While material progress in the community was notable, the spiritual life of the Little River people was enriched. Special stress was placed upon the youth program, and improvement of the grounds around the Baptist Church. Rev. John T. Neal is pastor of the Little River Baptist Church, shown at top left.

Club members have converted the abandoned school house into an attractive Community Center. Ed Mackey, the Club's first president, is shown on the porch in the photo at top right.

Center left: Among the many improvements made this year is this modern dairy barn and silo on the farm of L. V. Gosnell.

A few of the many milch cows in the community are shown above on the farm of Freeman Nicholson. Mr. Nicholson is the only farmer in the county to win first place in the 100-bushel per acre corn contest for three years in succession.
