DR. BUSHEY TO MAKE TOUR

"Colleges and Universities must play a leading role in forging the instruments of international co-operation necessary to the establishment and maintenance of world peace," according to Dr. Glenn L. Bushey, in a forthcoming address to be delivered before all the High Schools in Buncombe County.

Dr. Bushey points out that a college education would enrich not only the life of the nation, but also that of the individual. A college education, "creates a richer, more satisfying and more meaningful life for yourself." He goes on to say that financially, also, a college education will prove invaluable. High school graduates earn 65 per cent more than Grade School graduates. A person with an A.B. degree will earn 250 per cent more. In this country, 50 per cent of the persons in the higher income brackets are college trained. The college graduate upon completion of his education will, in 10 years make more than an untrained man ever makes. His earning capacity rises steadily until he reaches the age of fifty.

Dr. Bushey will begin his speaking engagement next week in response to a recent survey conducted which shows that a very small percentage of Buncombe County graduates ever attend college.

SPRING SEMESTER REGISTRATION BEGINS JANUARY 24

Registration for the second semester at Asheville-Biltmore College begins Monday, January 24, according to Dr. Glenn L. Bushey.

All new students may register between now and that date. They are required to bring transcripts of credits from their high school or college.

Registration will continue through that week, and classes will start the following Monday.

OBITUARY OF A CHAMP

By JOHNNY TIPTON

Of all the dogs in the world, I suppose Puck was the kindest, the most gentle of them all. In short, he was the best of them all. He was the kind of dog everyone loved, and who loved in return. He was patient, understanding, and, above all, obedient.

We, the students of Asheville-Biltmore, have lost a great friend; a real pal, and believe me, we miss him. We took the time and trouble to raise the money to buy him, and now he's gone. Even though Puck is no longer one of us, his wonderful spirit of friendliness and honest-to-goodness school spirit will remain. He was well-worth the money we paid for him. In his short stay with us he gave everyone of us a much-needed shot in the arm, so to speak, of what it takes to have a truly great institution.

Remember the way he would come running up to every person he saw, turn his head, and stick out his huge paw for you to shake? Remember how he could consume enormous quantities of hot dogs, doughnuts, or what have you. And how he could lap up gallons of water at a time? Why, he would even take a doughnut from Rudeen's mouth without touching him. Gee, he was one swell dog, wasn't he? If only we could have been able to give him a large campus on which to roam, and a thousand students to scratch his head. I'm sure he would have been the happiest dog alive. Puck didn't mind too much, though. He was happy with what he had.

Puck left us with a challenge; to be eager to serve the school in as many ways as we can. He was eager to do this, and he did it so very well. If every student here at Asheville-Biltmore will accept this challenge as his own, to work hard at it, and to co-operate; then I see no reason why we can't someday in the VERY NEAR FUTURE become as great an institution as he was a dog.

To Pass Or Not To Pass

Now let's see an onomatopoeia is a—and then there is a restrictive clause or is it a non-restrictive clause?

This can be heard frequently these days. No, you are not in Miss Day's boarding school. Examination time has come to ABC; and everywhere students are busily scanning the pages of textbooks, reviewing notes, or trying desperately to recall those important facts of class room discussions.

A great deal depends upon these first semester exams, therefore, they are uppermost in every student's mind. We like to be helpful and about the only thing we can do besides lend you our rab-

RABBI UNGER ADDRESSES STUDENTS

"What The Jews Believe In," was the title of a speech given by Rabbi Sydney Unger in assembly Tuesday. Rabbi Unger stressed the importance of people living by what they believe in.

Rabbi Unger, who is a rabbi of the reformed Jewish organization, stated that Jews believe in God, the Bible, the Ten Commandments, Eternity, the Sabbath, in festivals.

Rabbi Unger is the founder of Asheville's Town Meeting of the Air. He attended the University of Cincinnati, Temple University in Philadelphia, and studied in Mexico. He is known as one of the best speakers in North Carolina.

He answered several questions asked by the students and faculty about the Jewish religion.

Rabbi Unger ended his speech with the thought that if people would put aside the petty differences and band together the world would become a much better one.

NIGHT SCHOOL REGISTRATION

Dr. Glenn L. Bushey emphasized in a recent assembly meeting that night school at the college will be continued for the second semester on Monday and Thursday evenings as it has during the first semester.

Students registering for night classes will be required to bring transcripts of credits in order to register.
