

The 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, Tennessee begins to take form as the exposition's permanent buildings and dramatically shaped tension structures spring up on the Fair site. In the upper left, the Fair's theme structure, the 266-foot-high Sunsphere. The pyramid-shaped pavilion in the foreground is the exhibit of America's gas industry. At the center of the photo is the United States pavilion and adjacent IMAX theater, featuring a seven-story-high theater screen. The 1982 World's Fair begins May 1 and continues for six months, closing October 31. (Photo by Michael Patrick)
